500,000 Years Apart. How Do They Do It? Farmer-Labor. Oil-Water. Freight Cars for Sale.

—By Arthur Brisbane—

Copyright, 1920.

The yachts raced yesterday, as ridiculous in 1920 as the Queen of Sheba's rolling camel would be racing against a sedan chair of Louis Fourteenth's period.

The yacht race was described by reporters in flying ships, forbidden by the rules to go lower than 1,000 feet for fear of taking wind from the sails below.

Five hundred thousand years, at least, separate the sail yachts on the water from the swift boats of the air, watching the race and sending the news by wireless.

At least half a million years ago some savage man padding his log in the water must have noticed that the wind held him back when it was against him, and decided to let the wind push him forward when it was with him.

The first creature that hauled up the skin of an animal and let the wind blow him along, was the first MAN, first admiral, individual owner of the first navy.

The Allies said to the German, "Give us two million tons of coal a month, regardless of your own needs, or we will seize your mines."

The news is that Germany agrees to deliver it. Perhaps the Germans would tell this country how they are going to do it. If anybody can sympathize with Germany's plight, it is the coal man of the United States, who finds it hard to deliver ONE to his fellow-citizen, to say nothing of sending two million tons every month abroad.

Production of gold is diminishing in the United States and everywhere. In 1920 this country will produce probably less than fifty millions in new gold, which amounts to about one-tenth of one per cent. of the country's total net income and an infinitesimal fraction of the total vale of products.

Pity the poor gold miner. His price is stationary. So many ounces in gold make so many dollars. When money becomes cheap, labor and other things dear, the gold ounce is worth only so many dollars still.

For permanent cheapness in a rising market nothing can be compared with gold except the work that mothers do in the home. That isn't paid for at all.

Major Schroeder, who holds the world's record as champion high flier, is automatically reduced in rank from major to captain, by some rule of the War Department, so he leaves the army.

The men that achieved the war's high record for squandering money and getting little in return, have not lost rank. And they are still in the War Department.

"FARMER-LABOR" is the name of the new political party. A name about as good, perhaps, would be "OIL-WATER."

Except in the excitement of the convention hall the farmer and the laborer do not mix. One living in the city, the other in the country, they do not know each other. They suspect each other, do not understand each other, do not work together.

Those that exploit both know what to do with the farmer and the laborer, just as the cook knows what to do with the oil and the water. Keep them separate, use each as needed.

A fine looking young woman, Miss Bielbirey, breaks another swimming record, swimming 300 metres faster than anybody in the world had covered the distance, winning by ten yards.

This young lady, whose excellent German name means "remain true," reproduces in 1920 the energy of her Germanic grandmothers in the ancient days of Roman war.

German women, when Ceasar was young, fought with the men, and when the battle was lost they hung themselves to the poles of the big camp wagons to avoid capture and disgrace.

That ancient determination comes out in Miss Remain True's swimming. The struggles of our ancestors thousands of years ago help us in our struggles today. Each struggle makes some cerebral convolution a little deeper, that means more "brain surface," more power.

This country, sending weapons of all kinds to those that fight Russia on the ground that this country doesn't heed the weapons any longer, is also buying guns and ammunition at this moment from England. We learn from the London Daily News that we are buying guns of "special British make," and therefore also buying "ammunition of special British make."

"In the past six months the American government has bought from England at least six thousand tons of explosives." Intelligent, isn't it?

It is not easy to understand why this country is buying tons of explosives and guns that England doesn't want any more.

Harder still to understand why this country recently sold more than 4,600 freight cars to Poland, taking long term bonds of the Polish republic in payment.

The selling of the freight cars is especially interesting considering that we haven't enough cars here for shipping coal necessary to keep our factories going and workmen employed. We have an interesting government.

Police Raid Garage in Chelsea Where Barney Shot and Killed Policeman

With drawn guns, four policemen today raided the garage on Winthrop road, Chelsea, where Herman L. Barney shot and killed Policeman Deininger and seized sixty-four gallons of 190 proof alcohol in a roadster. They arrested Salvatore Bruno of Winthrop road on a charge of illegal possession and transportation of liquor.

He was turned over to the Federal authorities.

The raiding squad was headed by Sergeant Bartley, who was with Policeman Deininger when he was killed. Remembering his experience with Barney on that occasion, Sergeant Bartley ordered all his companions to draw their revolvers as they approached the garage in the early morning light.

Upon entering the garage they found Bruno near a car which he said was given to his son as a school graduation present. Search revealed the alcohol. The police said they believed Bruno was acting for someone "higher up."

The raid was staged as the result of attention being called to the strange movements of the roadster.

Fair and moderately cool weather for the week-end is probable, according to Weather Observer Smith. Temperatures, he said, will not go much above 82 degrees during the next few days. North and northwest winds which are predicted will keep the humidity low and prevent the mugginess about which Bostonians have complained during the past week. Although some cloudiness is likely, the observer said, there is no prospect of more rain.

Mill Closing Alarms Merchants; Call it "Strike Against Public"

With the office of Mayor William P. White filled by agents of out-of-town factories looking for [illegible] skilled workers willing to consider employment, while Lawrence merchants complained loudly of conditions which threaten to rob the Woolen City of hundreds of families, Charles H. Adams of the Commission on the Necessaries of Life began today a thorough inquiry into the shutting down of Lawrence mills and the reasons for it.

Lawrence business men, who have had no particularly warm love for William M. Wood since the president of the American Woolen Company made his charge of profiteering against them, have intimated that the reason for the shutdown is a desire to keep up prices.

Some Lawrence merchants call the closing of the woolen mills for an indefinite period a "strike against the public." The charge has been repeated in one form or another in the local press. Commissioner Adams will endeavor to get to the truth of the matter.

Wilson Has 2 Plans to Get More Coal

Washington, July 16.—Transfer to the Interstate Commerce Commission of the war-time powers of the fuel administration or recreation of the office of fuel administrator are the alternatives which the President has under consideration for the relief of the present coal situation.

By virtue of the wartime powers granted the President by Congress he may reorganize any department of the government and transfer duties from one department to another. Coal operators as well as consumers in districts affected by the shortage are clamoring for action. The Interstate Commerce Commission, it was learned today, would prefer to take entire charge of the problem rather than be forced to deal with such minor weapons as are now at its disposal.

The State officials of Western States have asked the President to recreate the fuel administration and former Secretary of the Interior Lane has been mentioned as a possible head.

CROWDED CAR JUMPS RAIL

Passengers Badly Scared as One-Man Trolley Leaves Tracks at Quincy

A number of women became hysterical when a one-man electric car, traveling at high speed from Hough's Neck to Quincy, left the rails on Sea street, near Adams Shore.

The car, loaded to capacity, wobbled drunkenly for a moment and seemed about to overturn when the operator managed to bring it to a stop. The passengers, who were badly frightened, continued their journeys in automobiles.

The high speed of the electric, its light construction and a down grade, combined with a poor roadbed, were said to have been the cause of the derailment.

Huge Coal Profits of Sales Agents in New England Revealed by Lauck

Scranton, Pa., July 16.—Figures made public here at the hearing of the Anthracite Mine Commission which is adjudicating the differences between the mine workers and the coal operators show conclusively why Boston and the New England States are paying abnormally high prices for fuel at the present time.

These figures show that since 1914 the margin of the sales agents has increased about 200 per cent. The sales agent in this case is the mining company under another name.

These figures are taken from the exhibits which the commission decided the other day it had no jurisdiction to admit as part of the record, following strenuous objections raised on the part of the operators and show conclusively that the great anthracite companies, through their tripartite organization, have been reaping wonderful profits.

ADVANCE OF 20 CENTS IN BOSTON GAS TO GO INTO EFFECT SOON

RATE TO GO HIGHER IN SUBURBS

Consolidated Company Insists It Should Charge Consumers Fifty Cents More

Gas will be advanced 20 cents per thousand cubic feet to Boston consumers almost immediately. Meantime, the Boston Consolidated Gas Company will continue its fight for the 50-cent increase originally asked.

This was indicated when Corporation Counsel Arthur D. Hill, appearing for the city at a hearing before the Public Utilities Commission, said he would not oppose a 20-cent advance.

Counsel Hill declared such an increase would allow the company to pay 7 per cent. dividends. Lawyers for the company said the increase was not enough. With the added 20 cents, the price will be $1.30 per thousand feet.

Mr. Hill and Vice-President Edgar N. Wrightington of the Consolidated will begin a series of conferences in an effort to reach a compromise. It is expected any agreement reached by them will be approved by the Public Utilities Commission.

Besides the Boston company, gas companies in Newton, Watertown, East Boston and Quincy asked permission to raise rates from 45 to 55 cents.

Most of those companies buy their gas from the Boston Consolidated, and the increases are necessary because of the action of that company, their officials say.

U. S. AGENTS FIND $68,000 IN UNPAID TAXES HERE

The "flying squadron" of internal revenue deputies who have been conducting a four weeks' special sales tax drive in various cities of the State, have uncovered $68,000 additional taxes in Boston alone, Collector of Internal Revenue John J. Mitchell stated today. The other citie deputies have collected several thousand dollars.

Since the opening of the tax drive one violation was found which would yield more than $250,000 additional to the government, and another of $8,000 was recovered. Investigators report a return of 75 per cent. of the sum on a proprietor of a theatre.

In discussing the special tax drive Collector Mitchell said: "In the four weeks of the campaign at least 1,000 places in Boston alone have been visited by investigators and more than $65,000 additional taxes discovered."

St. John's, N. The Marconi Company has erected apparatus on Signal Hill and on the other side at Foldhi. The liner will try to keep up communication with the shore during the first days of its voyage and with Signal Hill in the latter part. Should the experiment prove successful the next step will be to establish direct communication from Signal Hill to Poldhi.

Governor and Family Have Warm Reception at His Vermont Birthplace

Plymouth, Vt., July 16.—Three thousand residents of the State of Vermont together with the State, county and town officials, gathered before the old Coolidge homestead to pay homage to Governor Coolidge of Massachusetts and members of his family on their arrival at the birthplace of the Republican nominee for Vice-President.

For three hours the Governor, Mrs. Coolidge and their two sons, conducted an informal reception from the veranda of the homestead, fronting on the village square.

Formalities were forgotten. The Governor's former schoolmates, now grown to stalwart men and women called him by the first name as they shook hands with the distinguished son of Vermont. Mrs. Coolidge acted as hostess to the grandparents and women and children who were among those present.

Cheers echoed for several minutes as Governor Coolidge was introduced by National Committeeman Kingsley. The Governor made a short address.

The honor guests included Governor Clement and former governors W. S. B Stickney and Allen M. Fletcher.

NOMINATION CHARGES FALSE, SAYS LANGTRY

A report that Secretary of State Albert P. Langtry was using two sets of nomination papers as the result of time, was classed as "an unfair report" to hamper the secretary's campaign for the Republican nomination for Lieutenant-Governor, in a statement by Langtry.

Langtry explained today that he had filed papers for renomination as Secretary of State prior to the nomination of Governor Coolidge for the vice-presidency. He explains that as soon as the Governor was nominated he (Langtry) withdrew his secretary's papers, and circulated papers for the Lieutenant-governorship nomination, on the strength of Lieutenant-Governor Cox's candidacy for the gubernatorial nomination.

ADAMS PROBES WOOLEN MILLS

Shutdown Alarms Lawrence Merchants; Due to "No Orders," Repeats Wood

overseers and superintendents of the American Woolen Company at his home in Andover, repeated a former statement that the mills were idle because of a "lack of orders." Forty-eight of the company's fifty-seven mills were represented.

"Every yard of cloth that we might be making during these days of idleness is needed," said President Wood, "but it isn't being ordered."

The Lawrence whirls seek to take from Lawrence some of its best skilled help are situated at Rails, Mass., and Meriden, Conn. The Rails concern wants 100 "family" men for an iron foundry. Meriden wants seventy-five men and twenty-five women.

Thomas F. McMahon, vice-president of the Textile Workers of America, makes the direct charge at Manchester, N. H., that one of the reasons "woolens" are piled up on tables or have been shipped back to the makers is that "at least 20 per cent." of the "woolen" goods turned out since the signing of the armistice is "no good, shoddy."

GOODS ARE RETURNED.

"As this price dropped," McMahon says, "the purchasers refused to stand by their orders and the goods were returned to the makers.

"The bottom has dropped out of the raw wool market the wide world over—see the 2,000,000 pounds of it in Boston warehouses—but this stuff who turned out when raw wool was at its highest price in history. Hence, the closing of the mills, which is likely to continue until the goods in mill storehouses have been absorbed by the market.

"This statement McMahon says, does not obtain in all the mills. He accepts many "small independent factories," which he declares have begun or are about to begin the manufacture of woolens of a grade equivalent to that obtainable before the war.

ABANDON HOPE OF 3RD PARTY

Forty-Eighters Repudiate the Farmer-Labor Organization at Chicago

By International News Service.

Chicago, July 16.—Hopes that a third party could be formed this year sufficiently formidable to cause worry to the two old parties were definitely buried in Chicago today.

Most of the elements which for a week here have been striving to bring such an organization into being were scattering to their homes today, convinced that all chances have been lost for this year at least. Some of them remained over, agitating the calling of a new convention of liberals. But their numbers are few and their enthusiasm considerably dampened.

The Committee of Forty-Eight, which went into a coalition with the American Labor party and then came out again, will continue its life as a separate organization. Some of the Forty-Eighters will stick to the "Farmer-Labor" coalition, but the great majority of them will not.

The future of the organization has been left with the national committee, of which J. A. H. Hopkins of New Jersey is chairman. He probably will call a meeting of the national body soon in order to map out the committee's future activities.

Parley P. Christensen, the Farmer-Labor nominee for the presidency, is en route to his home in Salt Lake City today. He sent back word by wire that regardless of what the Committee of Forty-Eight did he could not do otherwise than stick to the Labor group. Christensen was a Forty-Eighter when the amalgamation was effected.

The Forty-Eighters, in the turbulent closing hours of their convention, officially repudiated, in part, the disastrous amalgamation with the Labor party. While not mentioning the Farmer-Labor party by name, the leaders brought in a report that the purposes of the committee, which is the formation of a new political party, had not been fully realized and that the future policies of the organization would be directed by a national committee of ninety-six members.

GOV. COX TO SEE PARTY LEADERS

Prominent Democrats Expected to Besiege Nominee During Washington Visit

By International News Service.

Washington, July 16. — Governor James M. Cox, Democratic nominee for President, will arrive in Washington at 1:26 o'clock Saturday afternoon for his conference with President Wilson at the White House Sunday morning.

The candidate will be accompanied by George White of Ohio, one of his campaign managers, and will be the guest while here of Judge Timothy S. Ansberry. Judge Ansberry has long been one of Governor Cox's enthusiastic supporters and as a member of the District of Columbia delegation at San Fransisco, placed Franklin D. Roosevelt in nomination as the Governor's running mate.

Judge Ansberry said today that no detailed plans had been made for Governor Cox's reception. He will remain quietly at the Ansberry home until the time of his conference with President Wilson, but it is expected that a public reception will be tendered by prominent Democrats. All will be welcome, but no attempt will be made to hold a public reception.

Little is being said at the White House in connection with the conference, but whenever the subject is broached, officials become mysterious and hint that there will be "extremely disconcerting" to those prophets that have been circulating stories of a breach of opinion as to negotiation the cigarmakers and their employers came to an agreement at a conference which began in recess expected in the retail price of smokes.

Adams appointed four commissioners, two of whom refused to serve.

HARDING STIRS SUFFRAGE IRE

National Woman's Party Replies to Presidential Nominee's Pronouncement

Washington, July 16. — The National Woman's party is far from placated by the suffrage pronouncement of Senator Harding, Republican Presidential nominee.

In a statement issued from the headquarters of the party, it is intimated that the Republicans are not really anxious to see the women of the country enfranchised in time to participate in the Presidential election.

"There is just one answer to Senator Harding," the statement asserts. "What good will the fact that the Republicans have given 28 States do the women of America next November, if the 36th State has not ratified? Thirty-five States are worth exactly nothing to us without the 36th State.

"The bitter opposition we have encountered in the last few States indicates clearly that political leaders know well the difference between a 'good record' and ratification."

Keen alarm at the recent unfavorable turn of events in the fight for ratification of the national suffrage amendment is expressed by suffrage leaders of all shades of opinion.

Following the failure to secure a vote by the Louisiana Legislature and the refusal of Governor Clement, of Tennessee, to call a special session of the Vermont Legislature to pass on the amendment, a flood of messages has been received at Washington warning of the bitter fight the "antis" will make to defeat ratification by Tennessee.

Suffragists declare that the fight in Tennessee to defeat ratification is being liberally financed by the "wets," supported by a coalition of reactionary elements.

TWO SOCIETY GIRLS BREAK THEIR ENGAGEMENTS TO BRITONS

ROMANCES OF WAR BROKEN

Katharine Miller and Evangeline Johnson Revoke Promises to Wed Englishmen

New York, July 16.—Two well-known New York society girls have broken their engagements to marry Englishmen.

Dr. and Mrs. George Norton Miller, of No. 811 Madison avenue, announce that the engagement of their daughter, Miss Katharine C. Miller, to Captain The Hon. Andrew N. A. Van Neck has been broken by mutual consent.

Captain Van Neck, who served during the war with the Scots Guards, is a brother of Lord Huntingfield, of Hevington Hall, Oxford, Suffolk, England, who in 1912 married Miss Margaret Eleanor Cressby of New York city, and succeded his uncle, Sir Joshua, as the fifth baron.

Miss Miller first met Captain Van Neck when she was engaged in Red Cross work overseas. The engagement was announced last January.

The engagement of Miss Evangeline Hunter Johnson to Douglas Elliott Crafik of London, announcement of which was made by Robert Wood Johnson, her brother, in June, has been broken. Mr. Johnson said his sister gave no reason to him for ending the engagement.

Miss Johnson, who lives at No. 270 Park avenue, went abroad with Miss Alice A. DeLamar early last Spring with the intention of passing the Summer. She is a daughter of the late Robert Wood Johnson of New York and New Brunswick, N. J., founder of the chemical house of Johnson & Johnson. Some time after Mr. Johnson's death his widow was married to John W. Dennis of London. She died last September.

Mr. Crafik is a son of John Crafik, of No. 18 Netherhall Gardens, London. He served through the war as an officer of the Royal Garrison Artillery

$10,000 Shot-torn Gem Necklace Causes Row

Mrs. Gurnee Munn, formerly Marie Wanamaker, whose husband is suing express company for damage to necklace.

New York, July 16.—A bullet which shattered several diamonds in a $10,000 diamond necklace, is causing a controversy between Gurnee Munn, son-in-law of Rodman Wanamaker, and the American Express Company.

Munn purchased the necklace and sent it to his wife in Radnor, Pa., but before she received it, a bullet had been mysteriously fired into the package, causing several thousand dollars' damage to the gems.

Munn has claimed damages from the express company, but the latter, setting forth that a receipt from the Munn housekeeper shows the package was delivered in good order, has refused to accept responsibility.

Both sides have called in experts to decide whether the shot might have been fired into the package before or after the outer wrappings had been removed.

The company's theory is that somebody, after removing the wrapping, fired at the box fearing it might be a bomb. The wrapping was replaced, when it discovered what the box contained, they allege, and someone poked their finger through the paper to make it appear that the shot had been fired while the package was intact.

It was recalled that a bomb was delivered at the Wanamaker home at Tuxedo in an innocent looking wrapping. Albert Gustave Kurth, a former butler in the home, who had been discharged, was arrested and sent to prison.

NEWSPRINT HIT BY LACK OF COAL

Shortage of Supplies Increases Grave Pulp Situation in Toronto

Toronto, July 16.—The gravity of the paper situation here is increased by the shortage of supplies and more particularly, coal, according to the Paper Trade Journal. Some plants are running very close to the wind and are becoming exceptionally anxious over their inability to secure fuel.

Pulp of all kinds is very scarce and prices are on the ascendancy. Ground wood pulp, in a few instances, has sold as high as $150 for spot delivery.

Water conditions with some mills are getting to be very serious. Easy bleaching sulphite is now up to $150 and $190 a ton, while the bleached variety is bringing from $200 up. Kraft pulp is commanding $160. Instead of production at the pulp and paper mills increasing from this out it is expected that it will rather fall off, due to shortage of coal, pulp, transportation and other causes.

Quoted papers were all advanced a cent during the past week and one plant jumped its prices two cents a pound and the others may follow suit within a few days. Kraft paper in carload lots to jobbers has been raised another half cent and now fetches 12½ cents. Stiffer quotations do not obtain on the least sort and there is still some clamor for paper heard from jobbers and large consumers.

In the rag and paper stock market there have been some sharp advances, particularly in the latter. All grades of white cuttings are increasing in demand, and the talked of famine on the part of the paper mills so far as white blank news and other stock is concerned. Mixed papers are still in strong requisition and the price has not stopped going up. No. 1 print manilas are wanted at increasingly higher figures.

U.S. WARNING TO MEXICANS

Troops Will Disperse Rebels Fighting for Nuevo Laredo if Shots Come Over Line

Washington, July 16.—Mexican rebels and regulars now fighting at Nuevo Laredo must take such positions that their shots will not endanger life on American soil, otherwise United States troops will cross the border and disperse the combatants.

This warning has been conveyed to the leaders of both forces by Randolph Robertson, American consul at Nuevo Laredo, the State department announced.

In a telegram to the department, Robertson said that he had been notified by General Ricardo Gonzales, a neglect of General Pablo Gonzales, that he, Ricardo, had summoned Nuevo Laredo to surrender and had advised the consul and all other foreigners to leave. Under instructions from the state department, it was then that Robertson warned that American life must be respected.

The American consul later telegraphed the state department, "Nuevo Laredo is being attacked."

General Gonzales, if obeying, would be in a dilemma if the loyal troops retreated purposely or otherwise in direction of the American boundary.

SEVERAL KILLED IN FIUME RIOTING

London, July 16.—Several persons were killed and the Jugo-Slav consulate was sacked during a fight between Italians and Jugo-Slavs at Fiume, says a dispatch from Vienna today. An Italian mob attacked the home of a Jugo-Slav citizen. A number of buildings, including two banks and several Jugo-Slav coffee houses were demolished.

Hold Cabaret Singer in Murder Mystery

New York, July 16.—Shot through the heart the body of Alfred Grazeano of No. 41 First avenue, known to his companions as "Mike" McCarthy, was taken to Bellevue Hospital in an automobile early today by Miss Loretta LeRoy, twenty-five-year-old cabaret singer, living at No. 156 West Ninety-fourth street.

The girl at first said she had found the man dying on the sidewalk, but later, according to the police, admitted he had been summoned to the door of a restaurant at No. 87 Kenmore street, where they were dining together, and shot him down. A 16-gauge shotgun was the weapon used and both barrels of it were emptied into the man's chest.

Miss LeRoy, the owner of the car, Wilson Jackson, of No. 1460 Seventh avenue, and Pasqual Dinaro, No. 227 West Seventeenth street, who said that he had merely happened along and helped to lift the body into the machine, were detained as witnesses at the Elizabeth Street station. After being questioned by the police they were taken to the district attorney's office.

The police say Miss Leroy came here a short time from Atlantic City. Grazeano had paid her marked attention and early today they went to the restaurant, driven there by Jackson.

They had been in the restaurant about half an hour, Miss Leroy said, when another man wanted her escort to step outside. Grazeano excused himself and walked to the street. Miss Leroy said she did not see the man who called to him.

A few minutes later, she said, a gun shot was heard outside. Occupants of the restaurant found Grazeano lying on the sidewalk. He was found hanging over a stairway leading into a basement.

Detectives found two 16-gauge double barreled shotguns in the basement under the restaurant and a large guitar case. The detachable barrels of the guns could have been carried in the guitar case, the police say.

BARNEY TO FACE AUTO THIEVES

Will Testify for Government at Forthcoming Trials of Leading "Ring" Members

Herman L. Barney will face many of his former comrades of the famous "auto ring" and persons occupying respected positions in society as a witness for the government when the leaders of the "system" are brought to trial as the result of the investigation of Suffolk and Middlesex county officials.

IS READY TO ACT.

G. Stanley Harvey, assistant district attorney of Middlesex county, who has been searching carefully into the evidence against the principal offenders in the auto theft system during the past week is already in possession of sufficient facts to warrant immediate action, he intimates.

Startling disclosures are imminent involving persons apart from those whenever has been a breath of suspicion but the authorities are proceeding with a calm and collected caution to prevent pressure, considered large, because of the high positions held by many of those involved in the "ring," from interfering in their plans.

BARNEY'S "PALS" MISSING.

Incidentally many of Barney's former "pals" are strangely missing from their old haunts and the word has gone forth among the members of the "system" to modify their activities until the present surge of public indignation at the wholesale thefts has blown over.

The attention of the authorities has been directed to several places in and around Boston, including Cambridge, which are known to have been, and are now, in use as clearing houses for the traffic. Despite hurried efforts to disguise these places as innocent looking garages and barns, the authorities are familiar with the part they have played in the "game" and are ready to act at once.

CONVICTS ADMIT DOUBLE MURDER

Confess Killing Man and Girl in Elizabeth, N. J., Two Years Ago

Elizabeth, N. J., July 16.—Confessions by two prisoners in Auburn State Penitentiary cleared up a mysterious double murder, which has been puzzling police here for two years. The prisoners are Charles Ferthand and Howard Lamble.

Prosecutor Walter L. Hatfrills said the men, serving six-year terms, confessed to having killed Miss Edith L. Janny and Edward Jupfer in August, 1918. Since the bodies of the couple were found seated in an automobile, in which they were returning from a beach party, the police have worked on the theory that the double murder was caused by jealousy. The two men, the prosecutor said, have admitted shooting the couple in an attempted holdup, after they had been given a ride in the machine.

FIND NEW PROCESS OF VULCANIZING RUBBER

A new process of vulcanizing rubber which may revolutionize the industry has been reported from the College of Technology, Manchester, England. By means of sulphur dioxide and superheated steam the vulcanizing is made possible, according to reports. Such a process has been expected to produce less time for some time through the same substances, according to C. A. Emerson of the Converse Rubber Company. "The effect of such a discovery would be a shortening of the cure of rubber from six or seven hours to say fifteen minutes," he said.

ISSUES CALL TO AVOID OIL WAR

Head of Anglo-American Company Says U. S. Interests Will Be Safeguarded

By International News Service.

London, July 16.—A call for peace in the threatened international "oil war" was sounded today by Francis E. Powell, chairman of the Anglo-American Oil Company.

Mr. Powell's views are considered especially significant in view of the recent statement of the Daily Express that British oil interests are planning to invade America and fight the Standard oil on her own doorstep. Asked how the difficulties in Mexico might affect the big supplies of American oil which are being delivered here, Mr. Powell said: "America can draw from Mexico large quantities of low grade oil—to produce of great need at the present moment. We are sure that our interests—which, of course, are those of America—will be safeguarded whatever happens in Mexico.

"During the war America supplied 85 per cent. of the gasoline used by this country and the allies. In rendering this great service to the allied cause the American producers, refiners and shippers drew heavily upon their reserves. This is the primary cause of the shortage today, for it was the necessity of the refiners and producers to carry reserve stocks amounting to millions of barrels."

Mr. Powell said he had no doubt "that the British government has given control of the oil production in the entire territory to a single company. In view of the fact that the British empire produces less than 5 per cent. of the oil production of the world and less than 20 per cent. of its own consumption, no matter what is done in these mandated territories it would take from five to ten years to produce sufficient to satisfy Britain's requirements."

Elwell Told Girl His Days Were Numbered

New York, July 16.—Miss Elsie Rudd, in her early twenties, slight and very pretty, quoted Joseph B. Elwell, turfman and card expert, whose murder has mystified the police for two months, as having said to her only a few months before his death:

"I feel that my years are numbered. When the end comes, I hope it will come quickly."

Miss Rudd was questioned by reporters.

"I have been expecting someone to ask me about my acquaintance with Mr. Elwell," she said. "I would have come forward voluntarily, but that I knew nothing definite to tell the authorities. Mr. Elwell was a generous companion and occasionally I took dinner or twice a month, when he entertained me in his home or elsewhere.

"He was gallant and I might have met my end before had I known that he was married and that he had other women friends much more beautiful than myself. He often told me, though, 'almost all women are catty—you are a welcome exception.'

"Somehow I feel that his death was caused directly or indirectly by one of those attractive women."

Miss Rudd said that on the several occasions when Elwell had taken her to dinner at restaurants, he had always insisted upon facing the door so he could see everybody who came in.

Newry, County Down, Ireland, July 16.—"Yes, I remember a woman who called herself Beatrice." said Mrs. Annie Kane, former housekeeper of Joseph Bowne Elwell, the murdered New York turfman.

Her statement was in response to inquiries regarding the new "Mystery woman" injected into the investigation of the murder mystery recently, when it was said that Elwell, who was found dead as one of Elwell's intimate women friends and most frequent callers at his home was a mysterious "Beatrice" from Yard, having come to England shortly after the murder.

"Beatrice," continued Mrs. Kane, "once used the surname 'Fairfax' in a letter which she wrote to Mr. Elwell."

(Note—The New York district attorney's office has stated that notes "Beatrice" were found among Elwell's effects.)

Elwell wrote Mr. Elwell hundred of postcards when she was on a tour of America as an actress.

Mr. Elwell kept a small notebook containing the names of the women he associated with. In it he had their addresses and telephone numbers."

Lack a Cozy Home, So Honeymoon Apart

Clinton, July 16.—The reason Miss Laura Zink never took a honeymoon trip on June 26 she became Mrs. Walter Schmidt is that she and Mr. Schmidt wanted to remain in Clinton, but couldn't find a flat.

Walter Schmidt, a fireman, denies that the bridegroom in the case. "I guess if I was married," he said, "you couldn't be bunking all alone at the Central fire station. We'd have a cozy little flat, just big enough for two."

GERMANS OFFER NEW COAL PLAN

Counter Proposals Submitted at Spa Considered at Allied Envoys' Conference

By International News Service.

Spa, Belgium, July 16.—New counter proposals dealing with the delivery of coal by Germany to the Allies were presented to the allied conference by the German delegation early today.

They were considered at a meeting of the Allied Premiers during the morning, when separate conferences were held by the Allied and German statesmen.

Premier Delacroix of Belgium, presiding over the Spa conference, announced that the Germans would be called in at 4 o'clock this afternoon to give their final answer to the Allies. The original plan had called for a joint session of the Allied and German delegates at noon.

Confusion and some mystery have surrounded the coal discussions since Wednesday night when it was reported that Germany, under the threat of an Allied ultimatum, decided to accept the Allies' terms providing for the delivery of 2,000,000 tons of coal monthly. The allied ultimatum was said to have threatened the occupation of the Ruhr district unless the Germans accepted the Allied terms by noon Thursday.

The Germans in the meantime made a counter offer to the Allies' demands the Allied terms under certain conditions. It was declared last night that the Germans had not been given an extension of time until noon today to accept the Allies' terms.

The fate of the German conditions was not made plain. Then followed the latest development—the counter offer by the Germans early today. There are indications that dissensions have developed in the German delegation over the allied coal protocol which may have influenced the allies in granting the Teutons more time for discussions among themselves.

The talk of an ultimatum has dwindled since Thursday morning and Dr. Walter Von Simons, the German Foreign Secretary, denied that any ultimatum had been handed to the Teutonic delegation.

Report 80-Mile an Hour Race on State Road

The sequel to an alleged race on the State highway in the town of Mattapoisett, in which competing motor cycles are said to have made a speed estimated at 80 miles an hour, was revealed today at the State House when Registrar of Motor Vehicles Frank A. Goodwin announced the suspension of four licenses.

According to Registrar Goodwin the racers were John E. Wilkinson of Fall River and John Jarvis of Taunton, who were fined $100 each and the event took place at 7:30 p. m.

Three heats were run, Registrar Goodwin says, and before the program was completed Officer Tripp of New Bedford came along, and to see how the racers compared with his own machine, became an added starter.

The licenses suspended are those of the three men named and that of Frank Jarvis of Fairhaven, whose part in the race Mr. Goodwin says is not made entirely clear by the report of agents.

Under the law, the registrar points out, 20 miles an hour is the speed limit for motorcycles. The suspensions are for an indefinite period, Wilkinson, Dexter and the Jarvises have the right to ask for a hearing, at which Goodwin must show cause for his order.

The suspension, Registrar Goodwin says, is not only because of the alleged violation of the law but for the purpose of curbing the desire of motorcyclists everywhere to use the State highways as racetracks.

What's Loss of Wheel to a Flivver!

Winchendon, July 16.—Maybe you think you've heard all the flivver stories, but—

When Clifton A. Daniels, driver of the special mail and R. F. D., hopped out of his car in front of White's store to nurse a stalled engine he found out why everybody along the road had been shouting and pointing at him.

The left front wheel of the car was absent without official leave.

Cliff thought the wheel must be near at hand, but it was found near the postoffice, more than a mile away.

"And I'll be hornswiggled," Daniels told the boys at White's, "if its absence made any apparent difference in the riding qualities of the machine."

BARNEY MADE OWN SURRENDER TERMS

Auto Gang Ordered Fugitive Back to Prison, But He Held Whip Hand by His Knowledge of Thieves

How Herman L. Barney's unique "vacation" from Charlestown State Prison ended, and he returned to the mirthless, walled enclosure, are told in today's final installment of the Boston American's exclusive story of Barney's escape and return.

On Tuesday, June 29, Herman L. Barney realized his vacation was over. The game was up. By those mysterious, unmistakable signs by which members of the underworld convey messages from one to another the fugitive had received the tip that he was due back in Warden Shattuck's "college," if he wished to remain alive.

He also realized, however, that even though he must go back, his hand did not consist entirely of deuces. He held some good strong cards, although no longer the winning hand.

At a few words from him would come the big exposure which, more than all else the members of the auto thieves' gang from the men higher up—"the board of directors" to the underlings feared. This knowledge which made them dangerous to him also made him dangerous to them.

DELIVERED HIS ULTIMATUM.

So long as most of his freedom, he was nevertheless to perhaps a greater degree than at any time since he reached Cambridge after his escape, the master of his own movements.

He received the gang's ultimatum, and delivered one of his own.

He would, he told them, deliver himself up to but one man, and that man must be Nathan A. Tufts, District Attorney of Middlesex County.

Barney remembered back to the time when during the war "Nate" Tufts had done him an unforgettable favor in allowing him to plead guilty to one of several indictments for auto stealing and pay a fine of $400, in order that he might continue his service in the army, where he had attained a record of which he was rightly proud. He also had in mind Tufts' reputation for being "strictly on the level" in all cases.

WANTED O'HALLORAN THERE.

Furthermore Barney stipulated that he would proceed alone to a spot a short distance from Brattleboro, Vt., where he would give himself into District Attorney Tufts' custody.

Barney, while at Camp Devens, served as a member of the Military Police of the Twelfth Company, and while serving in this capacity met Inspector Edward P. O'Halloran of the Boston police, known as one of the brightest men of the Middlesex County police, who had been loaned to Camp Devens by Governor McCall, to take charge of the vice squad.

Realizing that it would probably be impossible for him to deliver himself up in a single man, he stipulated that Inspector O'Halloran and no one else must accompany District Attorney Tufts.

Little did Barney trust the members of the gang at this time that he did not communicate his intention to them, contenting himself with letting them know that he would return to Charlestown.

CALLED TUFTS ON PHONE.

He personally called District Attorney Tufts on the telephone at East Cambridge, and offered to give himself into the custody of Mr. Tufts and Inspector O'Halloran at 3 o'clock Wednesday, June 30.

Arrangements were accordingly made and District Attorney Tufts left in an automobile for Vermont.

Near the Western border of the State he was joined by Inspector O'Halloran, who had also gone by machine.

A short distance from Brattleboro, Vt., they found Barney standing at the side of the road, awaiting them. He wore a pair of khaki trousers and a blue sweater, and looked as though he had been roughing it for some time.

Barney's first act as Tufts got out of the machine was to shake the district attorney's hand warmly.

WAS NOT HANDCUFFED.

"Barney, you're a fugitive from justice, and I suppose I've got to handcuff you," said the district attorney.

"Mr. Tufts, you don't need to. I've said I was going to give myself up, and I am going through with it. You needn't put the bracelets on me."

Tufts and O'Halloran were so impressed with the fugitive's straightforward manner after a short talk with him that they permitted him to return without being handcuffed. They even permitted him to step into a farmhouse and change his clothing, removing the khaki trousers and and sweater, and donning a finely tailored blue suit with a pencil stripe, silk shirt, silk stockings, silk underwear, new shoes and a new straw hat from which the name of the maker had been removed.

Barney had only between nine and ten dollars in his possession. He carried no weapon of any kind any more than he did at any other time during his "vacation."

THE HOMEWARD TRIP.

He stepped into the District Attorney's automobile with an audible sigh of relief, and the homeward trip was started.

On the way he talked chiefly of generalities, saying nothing of his experiences, and remaining silent on the subject of how he got away or what he had done since May 25.

He expressed a desire to see his father and mother in Arlington, having learned that his mother had been almost ill from worry about him. The district attorney assured him that this wish would be gratified.

It was three o'clock in the afternoon when Barney was picked up. During dinner time approached, the fugitive remarked that he was hungry. The car drew up at a hotel along the route and the three men enjoyed a hearty repast, Barney being treated as though he was a guest rather than a prisoner.

DICTATED HIS STATEMENT.

During the meal the district attorney arranged to have his stenographer meet the party a short distance from Boston. When the party arrived here Barney was permitted to telephone to his parents. He then dictated a statement—already printed in the American—to the stenographer. This statement was the only communication he would vouchsafe to newspapermen.

He was next taken to Newton where he was booked at the police station as a fugitive from justice, the credit for the arrest being given to Inspector O'Halloran.

Thence he motored to his home in Arlington, where he greeted his mother and father, embracing the former with much feeling on the part of the both.

"VACATION" IS CLOSED.

He remained at his old home about an hour and a half, reaching East Cambridge penitentiary about 11 o'clock. He was ushered into the district attorney's office. Swarms of newspapermen pressed him for a further statement which he absolutely refused. With much reluctance he was photographed, although shortly after the district attorney and Inspector O'Halloran had agreed to pose for him.

State Prison at Charlestown was the next and final goal.

Barney entered the prison smiling and extended a hand to Warden Shattuck.

The latter waved him roughly into the nearest cell the door of which was instantly snapped.

Barney had returned. His remarkable thirty-six days' "vacation" was over.

(THE END.)

NAMES MEMBERS OF 'AUTO RING'

Newton Policeman Unwittingly Witnessed Sale of Stolen Car, Says Trask

In today's instalment of the expose of the auto theft syndicate, James E. Trask, confessed member of the ring, tells about a fellow named Daniel, known as "the Constable," from Woonsocket, R. I., and George Schwab and Charles Williams from Providence. Trask claims this trio and a flashy young man from Worcester had dealings with the Aronofsky brothers, junk dealers, at whose yard Samuel C. Harris, wealthy horse trader, who employed Trask as "manager," procured junk cars for many months. Trask today gives a graphic history of the fate of a stolen Overland.

Trask says Williams, a "salesman" representing the agency in Rhode Island, received pay for a stolen car in the rear room of Harris' livery stable and garage, while a member of the Newton police force was sitting there, ignorant of the nature of the transaction. The latter, a friend of policeman scared Williams, who accused Trask of trying to set a trap for him.

DISCUSSED "CONSTABLE."

Q—Did you talk with Harris about what business these men were in? A—Yes. Any time I got a car A—Aronofsky's he would ask me who brought it.

Q—And did you discuss with him, Williams, Schwab and Manuel the "Constable"? A—Yes.

Q—And did you discover what line of business they were in? A.—Yes.

Q—From whom? A.—From themselves.

Here Trask told of the purchase of a Meta by Harris and how the "Constable" showed him how to shift the little brass tag containing the number of the motor. He said Harris used this Meta as his personal car for a time as he did other cars later.

Q—Do you recall having anything to do with an Overland car? A—Yes. One afternoon I was out in Weston and when I got back to the garage the girl told me Mr. Harris had called several times trying to get me. I called Mr. Harris up and he told me to take my number plates (the ones Trask said he got although he never owned a car personally) and come in. I went there and he told me he had bought a car; that it was at Aronofsky's and that he was giving $175 for it. That he owe $125 to go over and pay for it. I went over and looked at the car and refused to take it. I had considerable argument with Aronofsky. He said it was none of my business.

Q—Why didn't you take the car? A—Why, it had a lot of identification marks on it that I didn't like. It was too large a car.

HAD TELL-TALE MARKS.

Q—Describe the identification marks? A—Well, it had a bumper, it had a mirror on the windshield; it had three initials on the side, the letters "M.E.P." and "M.L.P." and there were three-quarters of an inch long, gold letters, very plain. I brought Harris back and handed it to Mr. Harris and told him he didn't want anything to do with that car.

Q—Did you tell him why? A—Yes, sir. I told him there were too many identification marks. About the time we were talking in came Aronofsky and Williams and Charles Williams from Providence, R. I. They left the car standing outside. Aronofsky came up to me and started in with his tongue the same as he had in his yard, and said it was none of my business; that Mr. Harris had bought the car.

Mr. Harris said very little and finally we made so much noise that he told me I had better go fix it up with them. He got the money—said he would buy it a little cheaper or something, and he got me $300 and told me to go fix it up with them. So I ran the car in the little barn on Travers street. Williams took off the Providence number plate and put the Newton number plate on.

MEETS POLICEMAN.

Q—Of the Elmwood garage? A—Yes, sir. And I got some sandpaper and a bottle of shellac, took the letters off the door and shellacked it over where the letters were. Then he went in the office. I went in with him and somebody opened the back office door so that I could go in the back office to pay him. When I stepped through into the back office there was a policeman sitting there smoking. It was about five minutes of six. William turned, looked at me sworn and said: "What kind of a trap are you getting me into?" I told him it was all right, to come right in. He came in and I handed him $300. He said, "Nothing doing." Finally I gave him $20 more.

Q—Where was Harris? A—In the front office.

Q—Where was Aronofsky? A—Out on the barn floor.

Q—Was the $300 offered to Williams as the result of a talk you had with Harris? A—It was. Mr. Harris said I could get a bush.

Q—What is a bush? A—A commission.

GAVE HIM $20 MORE.

Q—What happened? A—Well, Williams said "Nothing doing." I couldn't have too much argument with him there and I gave him $20 more and he stuck out for the other $5, but finally put the $320 in his pocket.

Q—What was the value of that car at that time? A—They sold for $1,315 at the factory.

Q—What was the condition of the car? A—Very near new.

Q—It was $1,189, the price, you say? A—It was $1,115 and freight. Alex Aronofsky charged the $5 to Mr. Harris' account.

Q—Did you have occasion to do any work yourself in regard to changing up and erasing letters. A—Why, yes. We smoothed—I smoothed it up some. Re-shellacked it.

Q—You say that car went to Harris' garage. A—Yes, sir.

Q—How long did it stay there? A—All through the Fall and Winter, along January or February.

TOOK NO CHANCES.

Q—Then what happened? A—Mr. Harris and his chauffeur were out on Columbia road and the car skidded and struck a stone wall and broke the engine base and the front axle was twisted, mudguards broken and damage to the radiator. When we first get the car whoever had it had run into something and it had been patched. I had a talk with Mr. Harris about that being conspicuous and asked him what he thought about it. He told me to buy a new radiator. I told him it would cost $40, and he said he wouldn't take any chances.

I went to the Overland place, bought a new radiator, went over to Fred Lacker's house in Arsenal street, changed the radiators, left the old radiator there and carried the car to the garage. I afterward traded the old radiator at a place on Stanhope street for a Cadillac radiator.

Q—What did you do with that Overland car? A—The car went to Newton, was used in the taxicab business and used some by Mr. Harris as his private car.

3 MONTHS FOR TAXI MAN WHOSE CAR KILLED GIRL

Portland, Me., July 16—George Robinson, a taxicab chauffeur, was fined $50 and sentenced to three months in the county jail when arraigned in the Municipal Court, charged with reckless driving. His arrest and arraignment followed an investigation into the death of Miss Celia Fitzgerald of Mattapan, Mass., who was fatally injured on the night of June 26 when Robinson's car collided with one in which she was riding. He appealed and was released in $300 bail.

Westfield, July 16—Friction between some members of the medical staff and the nurses is the cause of the resignation of the superintendent, Miss Mary McDaniels, and her assistants, Miss Louise Lowney and Miss Mae Chernick, of the Noble Hospital force. The resignations, which have created a stir here, are to take effect August 1. Attorney W. W. Elder stated. The board of trustees had no fault to find with the resigning staff members.

Lusitania Life Jacket Found in River

Philadelphia, July 16—A faded strand of blonde hair still clinging to the slime and seaweed covered surface, a life jacket bearing the inscription "Lusitania," was picked up in the Delaware River, mutely recalling the tragic destruction of the steamship with appalling loss of life, five years ago, by a German submarine.

The life jacket, despite its five years' wanderings over the storm-tossed surface of the ocean, was in fairly good condition. The name of the ill-fated steamship remained clearly printed on the canvas cover. One arm strap was broken.

SAYS PHONE OPERATORS WILL REMAIN IN A. F. OF L.

Miss Julia S. O'Connor, president of the Telephone Operators' Department, declared the operators would remain inside the I. B. E. W. and the A. F. of L. The men's locals are taking action with a view to creating an international brotherhood, independent of the American Federation of Labor and the International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers. Miss O'Connor said that, despite the fact the new organization of men technically claims the operators within its jurisdiction, the operators would regard as "unfriendly and hostile any attempt to enforce this claim."

Sure Way To Get Rid Of Dandruff

There is one sure way that never fails to remove dandruff completely and that is to dissolve it. This destroys it entirely. To do this, just get about four ounces of plain, ordinary liquid arvon; apply it at night when retiring; use enough to moisten the scalp and rub it in gently with the finger tips.

By morning most if not all of your dandruff will be gone, and three or four more applications will completely dissolve and entirely destroy every single sign and trace of it, no matter how much dandruff you may have.

You will find, too, that all itching and digging of the scalp will stop instantly, and your hair will be fluffy, lustrous, glossy, silky and soft, and look and feel a hundred times better.

You can get liquid arvon at any drug store. It is inexpensive, and four ounces is all you will need. This simple remedy has never been known to fail.—Advertisement.

To Ward Off Summer Complexion Ills

To keep the face smooth, white and beautiful all summer, there's nothing quite as good as ordinary mercolized wax. Discolored or freckled skin, so common at this season, is gently, gradually absorbed by the wax and replaced by the newer, fresher skin beneath. The face exhibits no trace of the wax, which is applied at bedtime and washed off mornings. Greasy creams, powders and rouges, on the other hand, are apt to appear more conspicuous than usual these days of excessive perspiration. Just get an ounce of mercolized wax at any drug store and use it like cold cream. This will help any skin at once, and in a week or so the complexion will look remarkably clear, young and healthy.—Advertisement.

GERMANY BARS AID TO POLAND

Will Refuse to Let French Troops Pass to Fight Against Soviet Armies

By KARL H. VON WIEGAND.
Boston American Staff Correspondent.

Berlin, July 16.—Information reaching here through diplomatic channels from Warsaw is to the effect that the Poles are outlining their frantic appeals to the Supreme Council of the League of Nations and to Marshal Foch personally, for aid against the Soviet forces, on the ground that Poland is the last bulwark against Sovietism and is fighting Europe's battle as well as her own.

French statesmen and military authorities who hitherto have been in the lead of those that have derided the danger of Bolshevism sweeping Germany, are now said to be getting nervous. Marshal Foch, it is declared here, is endeavoring to use the Spa situation to force Germany to let French troops pass through Germany and hasten to Poland's aid.

GERMANY WOULD REFUSE.

In all the Wilhelmstrasse offices it is declared that should such a demand be made on Germany she would have no choice but to refuse, for two reasons:

1—That it would be a violation of Germany's neutrality in the Russo-Polish War. Unquestionably an analogy would be drawn between the present situation and that existing prior to Germany's violation of Belgium's neutrality.

2 — The German railwaymen would call a general strike the moment the French demands were granted.

Unconfirmed dispatches from Dresden to the North German Gazette insist that the Polish military situation is becoming more grave daily. Poland, these dispatches state, has only 150,000 men at the front, and at home she is said to face a revolution.

POLISH PEOPLE CONFIDENT.

News reaching here through diplomatic channels is exactly to the contrary. These official dispatches aver that while there is great depression in Warsaw and banks and business are threatened with panic, the people are rallying enthusiastically to the support of the government, thousands volunteering for fighting.

In circles that are in touch with the Soviet representatives here, it is expected that Moscow will treat the armistice negotiations with Poland in a dilatory manner.

Lieut.-Commander Schiller, a German naval officer who left Moscow a fortnight ago, arrived here with reports of the surprising effect which Trotzky's armies are said to be creating everywhere, in view of the many false descriptions that had been spread about them by anti-Soviet propagandists.

CZARIST GENERALS LEAD.

The Soviet armies, he says, are excellently equipped and disciplined, and animated by true fighting spirit. They are led by Czarist generals and officers who appear to be on the best terms with Lenine and Trotzky.

Schiller scouts the idea of an overthrow of Brusiloff in the near future. He says there seems to be no confirmation in that direction among the troops, but that the Polish attack on Russia now frustrated, had rendered rather to re-cement the unity of the Russian people.

BLAMES R. R. MEN FOR FATAL HARTFORD WRECK

Hartford, July 16.—E. I. Rudd engineer of the public utilities commission, has filed report with the commission on the wreck of the Owl Express in the city on June 24, holding that conductor C. B. Seeley and brakeman P. S. Cantanguay of the yard crew were responsible.

He says they backed a freight train on a siding, derailing a car on the main line and left no light or other warning. The express hit the car and caused the death of engineer Ralph Gray of Springfield. Brakeman Cantanguay committed suicide here the day following the wreck.

They are among fifteen solicitors now working through the State.

NOT GUILTY OF ATTACK ON PROHIBITION AGENT

Joseph Morris, a saloonkeeper of Lawrence, who it is alleged dragged a prohibition agent over the bar by his ears, was freed of the charge of attacking Federal officers by United States Commissioner Hayes, as was Abe Jensky, a bartender, who was arrested on the same charge. Morris, however, was held for the Federal grand jury on the complaint that he had liquor in his possession.

LIGHTNING KILLS MAN IN STORM

Death and Destruction in Wake of Thunder Showers That Break Hot Spell

One man and two horses were killed, another man was paralyzed and a third stunned as a result of lightning in the course of the thunder storm which was most seriously felt in the Merrimac and Mystic Valleys, where it caused considerable property loss.

The storm broke the week's hot spell and cleared the muggy atmosphere, bringing a welcome cool period in its wake.

KILLED BY BOLT.

A bolt of lightning struck Milton H. Woodman, aged twenty-two, of No. 1077 Broadway, Haverhill, who was riding on a load of hay in a field off Liberty street, Haverhill.

Irving Atwood, who was riding with Woodman, was paralyzed and two horses attached to the wagon were killed. Walter Cannen, working nearby, was stunned by the lightning.

A bolt struck the residence of Ferdinand Zumba, Brown's Lane, Haverhill, ripping off the side of the house, smashing furniture and stunning Zumba, his wife and four children. They quickly recovered. A flagpole on North avenue, Haverhill, was splintered and trees and garden truck throughout the city were damaged.

In Somerville, the tower of the firehouse in Union square and the two-family dwelling at No. 29 Wheatland street were struck by lightning. A hole was torn in the roof of the latter structure and woodwork on the top floor damaged. Boards were ripped from the firehouse and the fire alarm system was temporarily affected. The big bell in the tower was rendered useless.

BARN BURNED.

Trees were ripped up in Methuen and a house at No. 59 Floral street injured by a bolt which smashed through the roof of the house. In Medford, the fire alarm system and lighting system were temporarily crippled. An electric light pole and the flagpole on Grand Army Hall in Revere were struck by bolts and splintered.

Rain flooded streets in Arlington and Lexington, and in East Lexington the water reached above the floor of a stalled electric car.

Middlesex farmers and market gardners suffered serious loss, the rain raising havoc with their crops.

The barn of E. Payson Bennett in Wrentham was burned and its contents, including twenty-five tons of hay, farm wagons, driving carriages and tools, destroyed.

ACCUSE PAROLED YOUTH OF ARLINGTON BREAKS

In the arrest of Thomas F. Mooney, aged sixteen, of No. 18 Prospect street, Cambridge, who is out on parole from the State Reform School, the Arlington police believe they have the young man responsible for many petty breaks into residences in Arlington of late.

His arrest resulted from a break at the home of Rodney W. LeBaron, Arlington's superintendent of wires, at No. 29 Wyman terrace. It is charged he stole several hundred dollars' worth of jewelry and money, taking two gold watches among other things.

ARREST CHARLESTOWN MAN AS TIRE THIEF

Patrolmen Carnes and Sheehan of the automobile department at police headquarters arrested William F. Kearns, 23, of No. 328 Main street, Charlestown, charged with the larceny of twenty automobile tires, valued at $500, the property of the Boston & Maine Railroad. The alleged theft occurred on July 1.

20 WORLD'S RECORD HOLDERS IN OLYMPIC TESTS AT STADIUM

500 PICKED ATHLETES COMPETE

Junior Title Events On Today Seniors Will Come Out Tomorrow

By CHARLES E. PARKER.

With the Annual Junior National Track and Field Championship Meet serving as a curtain raiser, the great Olympic tryout games were held today at the Harvard Stadium.

Nearly 500 American athletes—the very pick of the athletic manhood of the nation—were assembled for the meet. Included in their number were the possessors of twenty world's records; national champions of the past two or three years; many who have won honors in past Olympic meets, and scarcely one but who boasted a college, club or sectional title.

They came from every corner of the continent. The highest honor within reach of track and field performers—that of representing their country in the Antwerp Olympiad—was the stake. The fastest cinder track in America was carefully prepared for their efforts of today and tomorrow. The greatest audience ever to assemble at such a meet was in attendance; and, with such conditions, such quality of performers, and such a reward, thrilling competition in every number and new world's records in not a few seemed assured.

Tryouts in Five Events on Schedule

Today's Olympic tryout events, which immediately followed the Junior National Championship contests, comprised trial heats in the 100-yard, 220-yard and 440-yard dashes, the half-mile run and the 440-yard hurdles.

The Junior Championship meet in itself was well worth the intense interest centered in it, as participating in the majority of events were men who later took part in the Olympic tryout contests and who stood excellent chances of winning selection to the United States Olympic team.

Entered in the 100-yard and 220-yard dash trials was the greatest field of sprinters ever assembled in a single meet in this country. The favorite in both was Charley Paddock, the wonderful Coast sprinter, who only last week equalled the world's record in the 100-meter dash, and whom many expected would lower the 100-yard and 220-yard records either today or tomorrow.

Many Rivals Close to Great Paddock

Closely rivaling Paddock were Jackson Scholz, the Missouri flyer, and Morris Kirksey, Coast star, who until he pulled a tendon at the Intercollegiate meet, appeared to be sure winner of both sprints. Further augmenting the army of dash stars were Loren Murchison, the Eastern 100-yard and 220-yard champion; Messinger, Mid-Western 220-yard title holder; Hayes and Williams, respective 1919 national champions in the century and furleng; Lever, the Pennsylvania freshman streak; Woodring of Syracuse, LeClney of Lafayette, DeWitt of Rutgers, Kelley, the former New England champion; Howard Drew, joint holder of the existing world's records in both sprints, and many others whose quality was unquestionable.

The half-mile run list was no less worthy. Earl Eby, the intercollegiate titleholder, ruled the favorite, but in Meanix, the Western Conference champion; Scott, former national champion; Mayer, former intercollegiate champion; Campbell, the Yale freshman star; Crawford of Lafayette; Helfrick, the as yet unbeaten schoolboy runner; Sprott of California, Spink of Chicago, Baker of New York, King of Holy Cross, possible; Ray, the mile champion, and Shields, the intercollegiate mile champion, should force the title holder to the limit.

Finals in Big Meet Come Tomorrow

The 440-yard hurdles brought out Norton, holder of the world's record over the three-foot hurdles; Watt, who holds the world's record over two-foot, six-inch hurdles; Meanix, the former record holder; Deach, who recently equalled the former record, and a half dozen others who have been so close to record time that a new mark in the event seems assured.

Of the Olympic tryout events on today's program only the 440-yard dash fails to disclose a possible record maker. In that event there are a number of excellent men, but none who appear to compare favorably with Ted Meredith at his best or Charley Reidpath, Schiller, the coast champion, ruled the favorite.

Tomorrow's program will include the finals in the five events in which trials are being held today, and the finals, or, if necessary, trials and finals in the following contests: Mile run, 5,000-meter run, 10,000-meter run, 3,000-meter walk, 120-yard hurdles, high jump, broad jump, hop, step and jump, pole vault, shot put, hammer throw, 56-pound weight throw. Immediately upon the conclusion of today's program the Olympic Commission will meet to name the American Olympic team, announcement of which will be forthcoming late tomorrow night.

HAGEN MOTORED DOWN TO DEAL

American Open Champion Lived In Far More Lavish Style Than British Professionals

This is the third article in a series on the British open golf championship and golf in England which is being written by Robert E. Harlow, the golf editor of the American who returned this week from Great Britain.

By ROBERT E. HARLOW.

Walter Hagen motored from London to Deal on Tuesday, June 29, the day before the British open championship started. He had previously played seven practice rounds over the tournament course and felt that he was well enough acquainted with it.

Deal is a seaside resort, situated on the Kent County coast, about a two hours' ride from London. It boasts a boardwalk, a pier with the usual amusements, ocean front hotels and boarding houses and a marine barracks. The marine band entertains evenings.

The Southeastern is the most expensive hotel. It faces the English Channel and on clear days guests are able to see the coast of France. It was headquarters for the Royal and Ancient committee and many persons prominent in British golf were there for the tournament, including Cyril Tolley, the amateur champion, and Harry Hilton.

British Pros Not So Well-Off As American

British professionals, as a rule, are not nearly as well off as those in America, and none was registered at the Southeastern. They checked in at the Black Horse and other more reasonable hotels. Hagen, however, and Jim Barnes, had rooms at the Southeastern and could be viewed from the boardwalk putting away three square meals daily.

Vardon, Ray, Braid and J. H. Taylor have made comfortable fortunes out of golf during the many years they have stood at the top, and George Duncan and Abe Mitchell are gathering their piles, but the income of the average British professional is far below that of an American professional. There was a vast difference in the manner in which American pros lived on their Southern tour last winter and the manner in which the British pros lived at Deal.

The Americans took many changes of clothing with them to the Southland and always appeared as well off as the guests found loitering about the winter resorts. When the Americans gather for their open championship they engage rooms in the most expensive hotels, play poker for large stakes, wear expensive clothes and carry bulging rolls of bills.

Title Contestants Lived in Modest Style

Such was not the situation at Deal. The professionals registered at hotels where for $1.50 a day they obtained a bed and breakfast. They wore plain clothes and did not change these between rounds. In fact, they appeared in the identical outfits on the boardwalk Tuesday night and Wednesday morning when they teed off in the championship. The favorite costume consisted of an old pair of long trousers with a golfing coat which had no style, and did not match the trousers. Coat and trousers were usually well worn.

Hagen completely smothered all others at Deal, professionals, amateurs and spectators, male and female, when it came to dress. He flashed something new each night, and whenever he drove off the first tee. During the tournament he wore enough golfing clothes to last the average British professional a lifetime of keen competition. At night at the Southeastern he donned evening attire.

There was a band concert the night before the championship opened. The professional golfers chatted between the music concerning the possibility of an American winning, the condition of the course and of the number of strokes it would take to win.

Harry Vardon and Ted Ray were among the number. Vardon said that he anticipated his trip to America and that he was anxious to see Bobby Jones, as he understood the Atlanta golfer had attained as perfect style as any golfer in the United States. This was interesting coming from Vardon, always rated as the possessor of a perfect swing.

Before turning in the golfers who had played in many championships at Deal, looked at the sky above the English Channel and said the weather conditions for the first day of play would be excellent.

(To Be Continued Tomorrow.)

DOUBLE SCULL RACE FEATURES REGATTA

The final event of the B. A. A. regatta, the double sculling race, proved the feature as well as a crowning climax to the members' rowing competitions on the Charles River. George Wahrle and Herman H. Hanley winning by a scant half a length in a gruelling three-quarter mile race.

WILLIAMS MAY HAVE NEW BOYNTON STAR

Williamstown, July 17. — Opponents of Williams College in football next Fall will have two Boyntons, instead of one, to cope with, indications pointing to "Charlie" Boynton, a younger brother of the famous "Benny," playing centre with the purple varsity at that time. He put up a whale of a game on the line for the freshman team last year, and is considered the most likely choice to succeed Mills at centre on the regular eleven this season.

Walter Baker Co. Outing

An all day outing at Norumbega Park, with a long list of sports and races, will be held tomorrow for the employes of the Walter Baker Company. About 500 are expected to attend.

The stock is large, the variety is wide, the patterns are exceptionally attractive, the styles are all in good taste, and back of every suit stands a reputable, well-established maker, such as the great House of Kuppenheimer. SHAMROCK'S VICTORY IS FIRST TIME A LIPTON BOAT HAS SCORED

WITHIN 2 SECONDS ONCE

Jinx Perches in Crosstree of Resolute and Puts Her Out of the Running

New York, July 16.—Horseshoes and four-leaved clovers were in the winds which boiled out the sails of the Shamrock IV. and brought the green-hulled, broad-winged flier across the finish line an easy victor.

This is the first Lipton yacht to win a race in all the years the baronet has been sending his Shamrocks across to contend for the America's Cup. Once before a Shamrock crossed the line ahead. But eventually lost even this victory by two seconds because of the handicap of a time allowance. The time allowance as announced was six minutes, forty seconds, subject to remeasurement.

At Shrewsbury buoy, nine miles from the start, Resolute, "going like a ghost" all except her auxiliary sails set, was four minutes and thirty-four seconds ahead of the Shamrock, and in distance, about a half mile.

Shamrock tacked and hunted here and there, nosing for a wind to enable her to catch up with the fleet American sloop, but unavailingly. It was Resolute's race. Slight scoring vessels were for turning about and calling it a day.

But the jinx was grinning on the bowsprit of the Resolute just then. Just as the throat halyards parted. Part of the main sail surged and the sail instantly freed of stays flapped aimlessly in the wind.

MAINSAIL CRUMPLES.

Resolute hung on, removing no sail until she had sharply rounded the turn. This was at 3:23. Eight minutes later Shamrock, flying all her line, swept by the disabled ship, the whose spars the crew had already begun to remove the sails.

The mainsail wrinkled, sank in a heap on the jib boom. Following it in deck came the jib, the small baby topsail. A sailor ran aloft and took the loosened clubsail, which was cracking and snapping in a brisk tenor wind, which, ironically enough, had just sprung up. Only the staysail remained curving on its halyard like a leaf.

The Shamrock running before the wind and uncertain of the seriousness of the disaster which had overtaken her opponent, was taking no sail. In a short time she became a tall silver needle like creature moving obliquely towards the horizon.

At 4:28:30 Shamrock IV. crossed the line. Destroyers and a multitude of river craft, huge passenger vessels let loose steam whistles and sirens. For a moment a pandemonium of howls, yelps and whinnies ripped the sky wide open. Then all was silent as the Shamrock came about, headed over, making for her anchorage.

When asked what the race had proved, Sir Thomas said it had practically proved nothing.

"It was an unfortunate day, all in all," he said. "There were many flukes, on account of which either boat might have won. The day was uncertain and very squally. I am quite confident of the Shamrock in a good steady breeze."

ST. ALPHONSUS A. C. TO HONOR ARTHUR ROTH

The members of the St. Alphonsus A. C. will honor their club-mate, Arthur Roth, Olympic marathoner, by accompanying him in a body to the tryouts at the Harvard Stadium tomorrow. Roth has been selected already by the Olympic committee. The club men will leave the house at Roxbury at 11 o'clock Saturday morning, ride in special cars to the Stadium, and parade to a reserved section in the stand. They will be accompanied by a band.

LOWERY IS FAVORED TO WIN WINCHESTER OPEN

Eddie Lowery, State junior and golf champion, is the favorite to win the Winchester Golf Club's open tournament, the semi-final rounds of which were played today. Lowrie won his way into the first flight semi-final round by defeating H. M. Robinson, two up. His opponent today was Burr Hexie and the winner is to meet the victor of the Wood-Stephenson match.

TUNE RESOLUTE FOR NEXT RACE

New Halyards Run to Gaff, and General Touching Up Is Under Way

yacht races a thing of history, Shamrock IV., the victor, and Resolute, the unfortunate defender, are awaiting the morrow and the second contest.

The shipping of a new halyard for the Resolute demanded the attention of the defender's crew. This will be effected before sundown, and the boat also will receive a microscopic overhauling from the tip of her bowsprit to the end of her boom.

As far as human care and attention can go every precaution will be taken today to avoid a repetition of Thursday's mishap. Though Skipper Adams and his crew have learned a hard lesson as a result of the accident, there is still a feeling of absolute confidence among them because of the fine showing the defender made up to the time she went out of the race.

The Shamrock's crew, with typical British taciturnity, refrain from talking about their first victory.

In the "queasiness" of things, the inevitable accident often upsets the affairs of mice and men, but in the belief that such things cannot always happen, and watching the two yachts in a fifteen-mile beat against a light and uncertain wind, it looks like the Resolute to win the remaining and necessary races needed to keep the cup on this side of the Atlantic.

Resolute has demonstrated that she is a marvel in light weather, no matter what she may be in a blow. The fact that Resolute was allowed nearly seven minutes and was four minutes ahead after the windward beat over the first half of the course amounts almost to humor.

Something is certainly wrong with the Shamrock or the rules that govern the international races. The Shamrock's performance has been referred to as disappointing. The afterglow is a pigeon, the Resolute is a swallow.

Apart from the accident the one result of Thursday's contest is certain. Adams, the Resolute's skipper, showed himself a wizard at the helm. His judgment was fine and his crew worked like a machine.

The Britisher cannot be accorded the same compliment. After making a bad start he appeared slow and undecided what to do in an emergency, when Resolute went skimming down the course a good 20 yards in the van. The American defense is safe in the hands of Charles Francis Adams.

The unfortunate carrying away of Resolute's throat halyards is doubtless the result of the craft's light gear. Light gear sacrifices strength and it must be remembered that the accident happened in a light breeze. How long Resolute would have stood up in heavy weather can only be imagined.

PEKOE KID WINS

By "BUGS" BAER

Sandy Hook Worm, July 16.—Tom Lipton drew the first tea blood in the wealthy boat tournament off Sandy Hook Worm. The Pekoe kid took his victory very loosely, considering his lack of practice in taking the laurel earmuffs.

The grand-grand-grand Shamrock was fatwheeling along in second place, same as its papa, granddad and great-grandpere Shamrocks, when only the Pekoe kid felt out of place. He was in first place.

The Resolute had thrown a shoe.

The old royal, jimsail, dahhail, halyards foiled the convention. The sail is not legal unless it has four names. This sail is also known as the throat halyards, indicating that the Resolute had developed aquatic tonsillitis and would have to have its maritime tonsils confiscated.

The throat halyards ailm a very big sail. It is something like the Piccadilly collar on a medium boiled shirt. But nobody ever went to a full dress affair without either a limo or a celluloid collar, so the Resolute was ruled off the salty turf.

After his opponent had picked up a keg of nails, all the Pekoe Kid had to do was to beat the fingernail watch factory. If he did the loop in six hours, the needle on the tea cup was his. The old boy hailed on his jibs sail and topsail mustaches and pulled his smile up to half mast. Felt kinda strange to lose the path finder, which had been showing the way for twenty years, yachtsman and yachtsboy.

Taking a poll of the delegation, the Pekoe Kid swung his ministered delegates and jettisoned seventeen tins of the best Oolong. The Shamrock picked up plenty and passed a school of naked sardines that were scooting the other way. It was probably the first sardine that Tommy didn't have to use a can opener to see.

After that, it was anybody's race and the Shamrock was anybody. Figuring on the lapped time spent in a Brooklyn drydock and the corrected time on the daylight saving basis, it took the Shamrock eight years, five hours and a few loose seconds to do what she did.

If she is a repeater, Sir Tommy will load the cup with sandwiches, Scotch, Oolong, and sail it home under its own power.

BRAVES AND CUBS CLASH TODAY

Tribe in Ferocious Mood After Four Straight Defeats by the Pirates

Chicago, July 16.—The Braves and the Cubs clashed in the first game of the four-game series, scheduled for the second western trip of the Tribe. "Clashed" is right; there was nothing gentle about the attitude of the Stallings players and they apparently did not care who knew it.

Four defeats in a row is apt to upset any self-respecting ball team, and when the Braves mulled over the series of Pittsburgh disasters, especially that ultimate horror in which they went down in the nine of defeat after having the lead, 7 to 6, they were in anything but an amiable frame of mind.

Maybe some of the rookies did not feel so deeply on the subject as their eloquent mentor, George Stallings, but, if such was the case, they gave no evidence of any modification of feelings.

McMillan an Enigma Until 6th Inning

For five innings Hugh McQuillan showed more stuff than any of the numerous hurlers that have worked out at Pittsburgh and yet the Pirates fell upon him hip and thigh for six hits in the sixth inning. Four puny singles in five innings had been the extent of their attack before the carnage began, and when a thing like this occurs one wonders what the psychology of baseball is.

It never does much good for a pitcher to run his head off in the base paths. He has enough to do to keep the opposition off the paths, and many a game has been thrown away because the pitcher ran out on a long hit such as Mac did and which was followed by the rout at the hands of the Bingling Bucos in the last part of the inning. The Braves had given him a fine lead of seven runs. Even when the four runs were in and Fillingim had replaced the slipping flinger, the Braves had no idea that the Buccers were going to be so bloodthirsty, but they were in a fighting mood and soon made Dana wish he was elsewhere.

Pirates Continue Crashing Assault

The Pirates continued their smashing tactics in the seventh and eighth until they had not only tied it up but went one better. Meader had replaced Ponder in the fifth inning and when a ninth hitter served for him in the sixth his place on the mound was taken by Fred Blake, a youngster who had a world of stuff but wild as a March hare. The young Pirate was for two innings, but in the ninth, with two men gone, Second Baseman Pick landed on a fast ball for two bases. Stengel, Dana with a beautiful triple to the right field fence, tieing up the score, with the winning run on Harold Carlson on the big Swede, was rushed to the rescue and made Cruise forget to scratch. He had to run far back for the smash.

Yankees Took the 'Sis' Out of Sisler

"Hip" Collins and George Mogridge hung up a record when they five times prevented George Sisler from delivering a safe hit with two men on bases. Sisler is leading the American League in batting and has also registered a greater number of safe wallops than any other player, but the dethroning of "King of Swat" Ruth for two games completely overshadowed the feat of stopping Sisler.

CHAPTER IX.

STEPHANIE QUEST was introduced to society when she was eighteen and was not a success. She had every chance at her debut to prove popular, but she remained passive, charmingly indifferent to social success, not inclined to step upon the treadmill, unwilling to endure the exactions, formalities, sacrifices, and stupid routine which alone make social position possible. There was too little to interest her.

She wanted a career, and she wanted to waste no time about it, and she was delightfully certain that the path to it lay through some dramatic or art school to the stage or studio.

Jim laughed at her and teased her; but his father worried a great deal, and when Stephanie realized that he was worrying she became reasonable about the matter and said that the next best thing would be college.

"Dad," she said, "I adore dancing and gay dinner parties, but there is nothing else to them but more dancing and eating. The trouble seems to be with the people—nice people, of course—but"——

"Brainless," remarked Jim, looking over his evening paper.

"No; but they all think and do the same things. They all have the same opinions, the same outlook. They all read the same books when they read at all, go to see the same plays, visit the same people. It's jolly to do it two or three times; but after a little while you realize that all these people are restless and don't know what to do with themselves and it makes me restless—not for that reason—but because I do know what to do with myself—only you darling—" slipping one arm around John Cleland's neck—"don't approve."

"Yours is a restless sex, Steve," remarked Jim, still studying the evening paper. "You've all got the fidgets."

"A libel, my patronizing friend. Or rather a tribute," she added gaily, "because only a restless mind matures and accomplishes."

"Accomplishes what? Suffrage? Sex equality? You'll all perish with boredom when you get it, because there'll be nothing more to fidget about."

"He's just a bumptious boy yet, isn't he, dad?"

Jim laughed and laid aside his paper.

Sweet Girl

"You're a sweet, pretty girl, Steve"—

"Why not be what you look?

Why not have a good time with all your might, marry when you wish and become a perfectly——"

"Oh, Jim, you are annoying! Dad, is there anything more irritating than a freshly hatched college graduate? Or more maddeningly complacent? Look at your self-satisfied son! There he sits, after having spent the whole day in enjoyment of his profession, and argues that I ought to be satisfied with an idle day in which I have accomplished absolutely nothing! I'm afraid your son is a pig."

Jim laughed lazily.

"The restless sex is setting the world by the ears," he said tormentingly. "All this feminist business, this intrusion into man's affairs, this fidgety dissatisfaction with a perfectly good civilization, is spoiling you all."

"Is that the sort of thing you're putting into your wonderful novel?" he inquired.

"No. It's too important——"

"Dad! Let's ignore him! Now, dear, if you feel as you do about a career for me at present, I really think I had better go to college. I do love pleasure, but somehow the sort of pleasure I'm supposed to enjoy doesn't last; and it's the people, I think, that tire one very quickly. It does make a difference in dancing, doesn't it?—not to hear an idea uttered during an entire evening—not to find anybody thinking for themselves——"

"Oh, Steve!" laughed Jim, "you're not expected to think at your age! All that society expects of you is that you chatter incessantly during dinner and the opera and do your thinking in a ballroom with your feet!"

Mentally Restless

She was laughing, but an unwanted color had deepened her cheeks as she turned to him from the padded arm of John Cleland's chair, where she had been sitting.

"If I really thought you meant that, Jim, I'd spend the remainder of my life in proving to you that I have a mind."

"Never mind him, Steve," said John Cleland. "If you wish to go to college, you shall."

"How about looking after us?" inquired Jim, alarmed.

"Dad, if my being here is going to make you more comfortable," she said, "I'll remain. Really, I am serious. Don't you want me to go?"

"Are you really so restless, Steve?"

"Mentally," she replied, with a defiant glance at Jim.

"This place will be a gay place to live in if you go off for four years!" remarked that young man.

"You don't mean that you'd miss me!" she exclaimed mockingly.

"Of course I'd miss you."

"Miss the mental stimulus I give you?"—sweetly persuasive.

"Not at all. I'd miss the mental relaxation you afford my tired brain—"

"You beast! Dad, I'm going! And some day you will find out that it's an idle mind that makes a girl restless; not a restless mind that makes her idle!"

"I was just teasing Steve."

"I know it!" Her smile at the young fellow, but her gray eyes were brilliant. Then she turned and nestled against John Cleland.

"I have made up my mind, darling, and I have decided to go to Vassar."

Home, to John Cleland and his son, had come to mean Stephanie as much as everything else under the common roof-tree.

Much Missed

For the background of familiar things framed her so naturally and so convincingly and seemed so obviously devised for her in this mellow old household, where everything had its particular place in an orderly ensemble, that when she actually departed for college, the routine became dislocated, jarring everything above and below stairs, and leaving two dismayed and extremely restless men.

"Steve's going off like this has put the whole house on the blink," protested Jim, intensely surprised to discover the fact.

It nearly finished Janet, whose voice, long afflicted with the cracked tremolo of age, now became almost incoherent at the very mention of Stephanie's name.

Old Lizzie, the laundress, deeply disapproving of Stephanie's departure, insisted on doing her linen and sheer fabrics and sending a hamper once a week to Poughkeepsie. Every week also Amanda, the cook, dispatched cardboard boxes Vassarward containing confections and culinary experiments, which she stubbornly refused to allow Cleland senior to censor.

As Tank, a textile yelly-cake and a textile jam cake will not hurt Miss Stephanie," she explained to Cleland. And he said no more.

As for Meachum, he took himself lonesomely about his duties, little, shrunken, round-shouldered, as though no discoloration in the family circle had occurred; but every day since her departure, at Stephanie's place a fresh flower of some sort lay on the cloth to match the other blossom opposite.

In the library together after the dinner, father and son discussed the void which her absence had created.

She'll get enough of it and come back," suggested Jim, but without conviction. "It's beastly not having her about."

Jim Understands

"Perhaps you have a faint idea how it was for me when you were away," observed his father.

"I know. I had to go through, hadn't I?"

"Of course • • • But—with your mother gone—it was—lonely. Do you understand now why I took Steve when I had the chance?"

The young fellow nodded, looking at his father.

"Of course I understand. But I don't see why Steve had to go. She had everything her to amuse her—everything a girl could desire! Why the deuce should she get restless and go flying about after knowledge?"

"Possibly," said John Cleland, "the child has a mind."

"A feminine one. Yes, of course, I tell you, father, it's all part and parcel of this world-wide restlessness which has set women fidgeting the whole world over. What is it they want?—because they themselves can't tell you. Do you know?"

"I think I do. They desire to exercise the liberty of choice."

"They have it now, haven't they?"

Virtually. They're getting the rest. If Steve goes through college she will emerge to find all paths open to women. It worries me a little."

Jim shrugged:

"What is it she calls it—I mean her attitude about choosing a career?"

"She refers to it, I believe, as the necessity for self-expression.'"

"Piddle! The trouble with Steve is that she's afflicted with extreme youth."

"I don't know, Jim. She has a mind."

"It's a purely imitative one. People she has read about draw, write, compose music. Steve is sensitive to impressions, high strung, with a very receptive mind; and the idea attracts her. And what happens? She sees me, for example, scribbling away every day; she knows I'm writing a novel; it makes an impression on her and she takes to scribbling, too."

"Oswald Grismer drops in and talks studio and atmosphere and Rodin and Manship. That stirs her up. What occurs within twenty-four hours? Steve orders a box of colors and a modeling table; and she smears her pretty boudoir furniture with oil paint and plasticine. And that's all it amounts to, father, just the caprice of a very young girl who thinks creative art a romantic clinch, and takes a shy at it."

Not Married

His father, not smiling, said

"Possibly. But the mere fact that she does take a shy at these things—spends her leisure in trying to paint, model and write, when other girls of her age don't, worries me a little. I do not want her to become interested in any profession of an irregular nature. I want Steve to keep away from the unconventional. I'm afraid of it for her."

Why?"

"Because all intelligence is restless—and Steve is very intelligent. All creative minds desire to find some medium for self-expression. And I'm wondering whether Steve's mind is creative or merely imitative; whether she is actually but blindly searching for an outlet for self-expression, or whether it's merely the healthy mental energy of a healthy body requiring its share of exercise, too."

Jim laughed:

"It's in the air, father, this mania for 'doing things.' It's the ridiculous renaissance of the commonplace, long submerged. Every college youth, every school girl writes a novel; every janitor, every office boy a scenario. The stage today teems with ballerinas and floorwalkers; the pantspresser and the manufacturer of ladies' cloaks direct the newest art of the moving pictures. Printers' devils and ex-draymen fill the papers with their draughtsmanship; headwaiters write the scores for musical productions. Art is in the air. So why shouldn't Steve believe herself capable of creating a few things? I'll get over it."

"I hope she will."

A Voice From the Sky

By NELL BRINKLEY

When a Girl Marries

By Ann Lisle

"LET her go," I cried to Jim, who made to pursue her again.

"Let her go."

But not for the third time, Virginia appeared in the doorway. She seemed to loom up, tall and gaunt and old and tired.

"Phoebe," she commanded, fixing her eyes on the girl who was clinging to Neal in wild-eyed horror, "Phoebe, you are to come to me. I have that much dignity—that much authority, I hope."

Wild Horror

Phoebe did not move. Virginia swept her eyes scornfully from the girl to me. For all her disdain and fury, I got the impression that her chin would tremble if she'd let it.

"My sister is to come home," she said. "I will not have her here. I will not have it. Perhaps your remarkable sense of diplomacy will make you tell Phoebe on which side her bread is buttered."

The amazing rudeness of this goaded me to anger.

"Phoebe will stay," I cried. "And if you have one grain of sense, you'll stay too."

But before Virginia could retort with the venom that was twisting her face, Neal stepped forward.

"Phoebe will come with you, Virginia—of course," he said in a voice so calm it startled me after all the strident, accusing, bitter tones I'd been hearing. "I will get a taxi and put you both in it. Take you home, if I may."

Her head high, Virginia answered curtly:

"That's quite unnecessary, Mr. Hyland. But thank you for the consideration. It's amazing—and refreshing tonight."

Then she swept out. Neal propelling Phoebe in her wake.

"Of all the darn fools!" stormed Jim.

Pat sank down on the couch, clasped his hands in front of him and let them hang in dejection to match the droop of his shoulders. I wondered what reproach he would fling at us.

"What's the use," he said grimly. "What's the use?"

On the morning after the complete fiasco we made of trying to reconcile Virginia and Pat, Jim came to me with an air of finality:

"We've hashed this thing over often enough, Anne. Here's my last word about Virginia Dalton. Her insolence is more than I can stand. I'm through with her. And unless you are the meekest idiot outside a feeble-minded Institute, you've finished with her, too."

"I don't think it matters whether we're through with Virginia or not," I ventured. "She appears to have finished with us."

"What do you mean?" demanded Jim.

"I telephoned this morning while you were in the bath. And Amanda reported that Mrs. Dalton could not speak to me. I know the message was that Virginia would not speak to me, only Amanda couldn't bring herself to repeat that."

"So she lets servants into the family feud!" stormed Jim. "Well, listen to me. Virginia's my sister, but if I hear of your humbling yourself before her again, I'll—I'll——"

"I can't threaten you, dear. But you won't humiliate me?" he begged, using Virginia's own word.

"You won't hurt me by putting yourself in a position to be flouted and snubbed and insulted by her again, will you?"

"No, Jim. I won't," I replied. "We've done all we can. Now we have to let Virginia hang her ain gait"—to destruction, if she likes. Pat's such a dear—so gentle and chivalrous under all his recklessness and boldness. What's to become of him now?"

A Nasty Prospect

"Oh, in the end I suppose we'll all be dragged through the mire of the divorce court" replied Jim, with what I felt was prophetic scorn.

And with this he marched off to his day's work, leaving me to go on with the task I had cut out for myself. But after our failure with Virginia, I didn't start out very hopefully for my uplift mission with Daisy Condon.

Daisy into a smart shop where I thought we could find a good looking, ready-to-wear blue crepe de chine. I found myself enjoying my own sensations and the situation of shopping in a panacea for all ills with some women. It has always been a bugbear to me. But the magic effect of the right colors and the right lines on Daisy gave me a feeling of power which my own ability to spend money and bring this change to pass augmented delightfully.

As we were leaving the shop—where we had selected not only the blue dress but a pretty blue hat faced in white—we passed a counter where there was a display of enamel lockets on narrow white ribbons with little enamel aides to match. A pretty blue one with a butterfly in gold and rose caught my eye.

"One of these would just set off your dress," I said enthusiastically. "The lighter blue and the hint of vivid coloring is just what you need. Let's select one."

"No, thank you," said Daisy, almost graciously. "First of all, you've done so much for me that I don't look myself in the face if I grafted any more today. But besides that, I hate any jewelry but the best."

The brazenness of it stunned me. I didn't seem to be succeeding in my scheme of filling Daisy with shame and loathing for what she had done.

"Have you heard from Carl?" she asked, as we strolled down the avenue together.

"No, have you?" I replied absentmindedly, racking my brain to think how to fill in the rest of the afternoon.

Daisy had been as easy to fit as to please, and her dress was purchased in the first shop we visited.

ABOUT OUR GOOD FRIEND

Hay

Copyright, 1920, by The Ledger Syndicate

HAY.

VARIATIONS—Hayes, Haig, Hawes, Hedges.

RACIAL ORIGIN — Middle English.

SOURCE—Descriptive term.

THERE is no connection whatever between the surname of Hay and the modern word "hay." The source of this name and its many variations is to be found in the form Hedges.

In the speech of medieval England, and, indeed, in the colloquial speech of many rural sections of England today, a "hay" is simply a hedge.

But the spelling of those old days was far from the standardized system which the increase of education and the invention of printing have made it today. Apparently, as those old progenitors of the English race pronounced it, there was something of the "g," or gutteral "gh," sound in it, which gave rise to certain variations in spelling, which have culminated in the forms of Haig and Hedges, and, of course, in the word "hedge." But as you trace words back in English you find there are affinities between "y" and "g" and "gh" and "w," which make them often interchangeable, as, for instance, in the pronunciation of Burroughs and Burrows. The "gh" often has an "f" sound, which is not far from the "v" sound that "w" retains regularly in Germany and colloquially in certain sections of England. So the various forms of the name may all be regarded as quite natural developments.

Of course, the surname was at first descriptive of the places of residence of its bearers, as "Roger de la Hagh," or "Simon Alten Haye." These prefixes, meaning "of the" and "at the," respectively, were dropped as superfluous after the names became established through ordinary use.

Michael Hay and Colonel Ann Hawkes Hay, a man, despite the first name, settled first at Kingston, Jamaica, in the early part the 1700's. They were of Scotch descent.

At eighteen years the colonel, as he was to be, went to New York where at the age of eighteen he married Martha, daughter of the Honorable William Smith, Judge of the Superior Court. Many of the papers showing the lineage and properties of Colonel Ann were destroyed when his New York home was burned in the Revolution.

His coat-of-arms is described as a "field argent, charged with three shields, gules within a bordure nebule of the last; for crest, a hand proper holding an ox; motto, 'laboranti palma.'

TO AMUSE THE CHILDREN

Mrs. Howard, my neighbor, often drops in to discuss household matters over a cup of tea. The other day she told me her fudge difficulties were ended.

"Your fudge difficulties?" I asked her.

"Yes," she explained. "You see, almost every day my little girl asks to make fudge. Marjorie is just learning to cook, and I like to encourage her. But my butter bills were mounting tremendously, and I was getting to think that fudge was just a little too expensive and I—you told me about Spredit. It is so, comparatively inexpensive. And you should taste the fudge. We like fudge better since we began to make it with Spredit."

FOR HEALTH AND BEAUTY

My two lanky little sons, age eight and ten, came into the sitting room the other afternoon. When I was entertaining guests. They were so ruddy and bright with health and beauty. My mother's eye reated proudly upon them. I was not ashamed to introduce them even to new Mrs. Allen, who had just moved into our neighborhood.

"So healthy and so beautiful," said she, echoing my thought. "How do you do it, Mrs. Neighbor?"

"They are Hood's Milk babies," said I. She hesitated a moment. "I'm going to get Hood's Milk for mine," she decided. It's several months now and you should see her Hood's Milk youngsters.

GINGER PUFFS

Ginger Puffs are such a nice luncheon accompaniment, served either for a sweet bread or as cake, that I think we all should know how to make them. Slade's Ginger is the finishing touch to my Ginger Puffs. Here is the recipe, as given in the Modern Cooking School Book: Beat one egg, add ¼ cup sugar, ½ cup molasses, 4 tablespoonfuls butter and ¼ cup water. Add 2 cups flour, mixed and sifted with one teaspoonful each of soda, cinnamon, ginger and Slade's. To this add ½ teaspoonful salt. Combine mixtures and bake in small buttered pans. You should first give your family these nice Slade Ginger Puffs once. They are delightful. Always be sure to bring Slade's Spices home from market.

CLAM CHOWDER

"Please give me some more of that good clam chowder."

That is what my youngsters tell me when I serve them Gossom's Clam Chowder. And I marvel at the skill that made Gossom's Soups. It seems a miracle that all the flavor of the clam and the delicate nourishment could be got into Gossom's Powdered Soups.

TOAST AND UNCLE JOHN'S SYRUP

Now waffles and syrup, for tea —it's the usual story. And too complicated for the youngsters. So Jane and I tried to get our youngsters to like toast, at tea. We didn't succeed at all until we added Uncle John's Syrup. Cut the toast in long thin strips. Then little glass bowls are poured Uncle John's Syrup. Now our youngsters ask for their syrup and their toast, and we are not troubled any more by them teasing for waffles. Uncle John's Syrup is filled with the finest buns and I are grateful.

Inexpensive? And you should taste the fudge. We like fudge better since we began to make it with Spredit."

AS COMPARED WITH HOME-MADE

I have often heard women say that they would never buy a loaf of bread, as it never always turned out to any to these ladies that it all depended upon the flour. Some home made bread I do not like at all to eat—it is rather under conditions too irregular, with heating of oven and mixing, bit-time. But Hathaway's Bread, the finest flour for home-made bread, is always up to the standard of the best home baked bread at home. It stands to reason that Hathaway's is much the excellent bread. It has stood the test of forty years; experience is behind it. It is just plain common sense to use Hathaway's Bread.

THE SECRET

"How do you make this wonderful Nut Cake?" my neighbor, Mrs. Howard, asked me that afternoon, tea time, when I first served the Plymouth Rock Jellied Tomato Bouillon.

"Why, it's simple enough," I told her. This is the recipe: One envelope Plymouth Rock plain gelatine; cup beef broth (cold); 2 cups hot beef broth (not); 1 cup tomato puree; 2 tablespoonfuls chili sauce; teaspoonful salt; ½ teaspoonful paprika.

Soften the gelatine in the cold broth and dissolve in the hot broth; add the puree, chili sauce, salt and pepper; mix and turn into a pan; chill and serve in bouillon cups. In place of hot soup.

Plymouth Rock Jellies keeps Plymouth Rock.

A SAUCY PEANUT SANDWICH

I like piquancy in my food. Particularly, I like it to make sandwiches, for tea or luncheon or picnic. Everyone likes a dash of smartness about them. And almost anyone knows, often the most delightful sandwiches may be made of such simple ingredients. There's my favorite Forster's Peanut Butter sandwich. I take my Forster's Peanut Butter and cream it in a little bowl; I add a dash of lemon juice, a dash of cinnamon, and a spoonful of grated cheese. This makes the most delicious sandwich you ever ate. And determine the distinction of the best slices of white bread with the mixture, and you have for tea.

The Guarantee Protects You

Amateurs and Semi-Pros

The second game of the five-game series between the Orient Heights Post and the Fisherty Post of the American League will take place at Wood Island Park Saturday afternoon. The two teams are playing for an American Legion Shield valued at $200. The first game was won by Orient Heights, 5 to 2.

This game will be a part of the annual field day held by the Assumption Church. With caller swinging for the Fisherty Post and Beckett in the box for Manager Allen's team, there is sure to be some fireworks, and undoubtedly the game will develop into a pitching duel.

Last week, working for the Maverick Mills team, Beckett stopped the winning streak of the Michael J. Perkins Post, who had won 11 straight games, and allowed them only four scattered hits for a 5 to 1 win. Mc-Coffey also put on a stellar performance for the Wednesday aviators in the strong Saturday contest. Mills, though the Maverick Mills team lost, it was only till days were set in that he allowed any hits.

The Plymouth Rubber Company is again represented on the diamond with a strong nine. So far this season they have lost but one game. In their lineup are college, interscholastic and semi-pro stars of renute. For the pitching department they have Lewie Smith of Whitman, who formerly twirled for the Commonwealth Shoe, and Shive Sheridan, formerly with the Pittsburg New England nine. Hendrich of Whitman is now doing most of the receiving.

The infield is taken care of by Jim Sheridan of Watertown at first base, Shiny Riley, who was the unanimous choice for the interscholastic nine of Boston last year, at second, Buck Crowley of Norwood at third, and Faulkner, formerly of the Chelsea Reds, at short. To back up this infield are Quinn of Manchester in left field; Jack Norwood, in center field, and Pat Wales, of the Canton High School, who had the record of twenty-three strikeouts in one game, in right field.

Olaf Hendrickson, the former member of the Red Sox pennant winning 1912 team, is coach of the nine. Teams who are looking for bookings with a fast semi-pro team are asked to meet the Plymouth Rubber nine by communicating with Manager P. L. Hotchkiss, Plymouth Rubber Company, Canton, Mass.

Another one of the stellar semi-pro games of the week-end will be played at the West Newton Playground between the Revere Tigers and the West Newton A. A. Red Hoffman, who has been pitching great ball for the Revere Tigers, will face the West Newton sluggers. In his last two games Hoffman has struck out 17 and 15 men. The Cooper brothers will be the battery for the West Newton nine.

After a delayed opening the Medford Town team has again taken the field with a fast semi-pro team and is anxious to book games with strong teams. Already an exceptionally difficult schedule has been drawn up, which takes in such teams as Winchester, Woburn, Reading, Wakefield, Fitton K. of C., Malden Legion, Arlington Legion, Liberty Post, Peterboro Post, and the management is trying to get games with the Dorchester and Lynn and the Marblehead Town team.

The team is made up of former high school players and is ready to meet any semi-pro team in or out of the State. As the Medford town field will not be available till after the last Saturday in August, all games are desired away from home. Communicate with Manager Lester J. Michener, No. 5 Cedar Cliff terrace, Medford 55, Mass.

A Sunday game which will draw well is the Dorchester Town team v. the Bayside nine. Jack Fitzpatrick and Dick Saphire will be the battery for the Bayside team, while Hebert and Wenster will work for the Dorchester nine. Gus Malley of Georgetown and his brother, Ned, will play for Dorchester, and Algy Hoar of Lawley's and Morrie of Seton Hall. The game will be played at Bayside.

Having reorganized their team and having a wealth of new material, the Revere A. C. of East Boston are in the field for games with any team in the city. Manager Al Gallo, No. 414 Saratoga street, phone East Boston 1200, wants wanted Saturday afternoon.

The Rubbers of Cambridge wish to arrange games with nineteen-year-old teams in the vicinity. Communicate with Manager Ed Jackson, 10 Jackson street, Somerville, 4072-J.

Games with sixteen-year-old teams are wanted by the Hyde Park Athletics. Manager desired away from home with half guarantee. Manager J. Keller, phone Hyde Park 0742.

PACKARD TEAM BLANKS BUICK NINE, 1 TO 0

In a fast game played on Volkmann Field, the Packard team shut out Buick, 1 to 0. Five hits were made off Madden of Packard and an equal number off Kiley of Buick, while neither team made an error. The game was the best pitching battle of the season in the Boston Business League.

ROBSON IS BACK SEEKING BOUTS

Malden Boxer Specifies Johnny Wilson; High Guarantees Are Hurting Game

By JACK CONWAY.

Tommy Robson is gamming in the home sector once more. When Robson first attracted attention as a big fighter his main boo delivered at Malden. Then, to change the monotony of things, Thomas grabbed a rattler for Big Broadway and made the city of lazz dancers and talkative fight managers his headquarters.

But, like many another noble son of sweat, Robson has returned to the home fireside. So that everybody will consider him the same lambling ring person he was out of old the Malden favorite has announced he is prepared to clash with all comers.

Robson isn't picking on any second or third-raters. He stepped right out in the front porch today and declared he would like to battle Johnny Wilson, world's middleweight champion, or Mike O'Dowd, who recently lost his title to the Charlestown warrior.

Anybody who plans on clashing with either Wilson or O'Dowd isn't lacking in courage no matter what else you may have to say about him. Robson packs a punch in his right glove which I believe can gain him a victory over any man of his weight in the well known universe.

Johnny Dundee Heavy Risk for Promoters

Johnny Dundee isn't the gold mine for the local promoters he was in times past. Since Johnny Wop first glided into fame as a fighter he was a good drawing card, but as gamble with the promoters as far as the gate receipts were concerned. Of late, however, Dundee has been demanding a heavy guarantee like the rest of the ring prima donnas. The result is that Dundee is no longer the asset he formerly was to the promoters. The Dundee-Jackson bout was a financial failure, while the Dundee-Downes tussle failed to go over big from a box office standpoint.

Killing the Goose that Laid the Golden Egg

The actions of boxers in demanding high salaries for their services has driven many boxing clubs to the wall. In the end the boxers themselves will be the ones to suffer. With only a few clubs in operation, there will not be such a big demand for the services of the noble sons of swat. The promoters will then be in a position to do the dictating. It will be a case of the fighters killing the goose that laid the golden egg.

Stecker Sets New Precedent for Our Noble Champions

Joe Stecker, world's wrestling champion, is a new type of title holder. He believes in giving all legitimate challengers an opportunity to grab his title. Since winning the championship he has met virtually every wrestler of any account in the world. As he has beaten most of them in a fare-thee-well, the sporting world is unanimous in handing the laurels to the farmer boy from the West. It was only natural that Stecker should agree to clash with Benny Gardner, the Iowa mat idol. Their meeting will take place at the Revere Cycle Track next Thursday night. Gardner has been training for the past week and believes he has a chance to conquer his celebrated opponent.

Evidently Brooks Doesn't Mind the Hot Weather

Tin-a-ling.

"This is Terry Brooks talking. I want the world to know I'm training again. Sure, I'm open to meet all-comers. In future I'm only going to take on the lightweights. I'm getting a little too far along in years to give away ten pounds or so to rugged roughs and then wallop them. Let the middleweights look out for me, however, and I'll beat 'em one after another.

Pretty hot stuff for a warm day.

HAWLEY-FOLSOM TIES WITH FILENE, 1 TO 1

By scoring in the fifth and final inning of a Business League game played on the South Boston ground, Hawley-Folsom tied Filene, 1 to 1. The only run was made on a two base hit off the delivery of Benson.

WALWORTH CONQUERS McELWAIN, 4 TO 3

Walworth defeated McElwain, 4 to 3, in a six-inning Business League game played at Fenton Field, Roslindale. King pitched the ball for the victors, allowing but five hits.

Red Sox Get Brady

The Red Sox have secured Captain Clifford Brady, infielder, of the Pittsfield team. He is to report next spring.

DEPARTMENT STORE LEAGUE NEWS AND NOTES

The Department Store League, organized this year after a layoff of several seasons, is fast gaining in popularity. Increasingly large crowds are attending the games as the season progresses and the audiences are drawn quite as largely from the general baseball-loving public as from employes of the stores represented in the organization. Snappy baseball is being played at all times and whatever the teams may lack in mechanical precision is more than made up for in the enthusiasm shown when on the diamond.

The R. H. White aggregation are leading the league, having lost but one game so far and won four. They won the first game of the season and since have been victorious.

The A. Shuman team has been showing a marked improvement since the first of the season. Every night the entire team gets out for practice at McNary Park, South Boston. The playing of "Ginger" Murphy, who is batting, fields and Babcock in the outfield, is noteworthy. At the beginning of the season the team was allotted $600 for equipment, and all the boys are working hard, to show their appreciation.

Tom Rafferty, manager of the Shuman nine, will put the old come-back stuff over this season, or he will know the reason why. Rafferty was formerly with the Cleveland team, where he played with Speaker. He is planning to go out to the Fenway Saturday afternoon before the game and watch Speaker get a workout with some Red Sox pitcher in the outfield.

Another example of the naturals of the game that Tommy Rafferty is, was shown by Sam Hickey of the Talbots shoe team. Hickey is a former star of the Lynn New England League team, and has been behind the bat in every game on the Talbots team.

"Mike" Wolfe is outstanding and shining shortstop for the Talbots. He is one of the twins his middle form for flagging them out of the diff and can also take a good swing at the old ball. Chet Lorraine of Krowell and Shirley Red have also been showing that they are other members of the Talbots team.

The Butlers team of the Filene store is a long time in publication on the baseball page, which does not come till a week from today. They have won but one game this year out of the season, but their work in other games would indicate that they have the material for a first place.

Captain Doolan of Plymouth Norwell has been spoken of as the best all-around player of the league. Doolan is starring for the club as pitcher in one game, batting all the time to playing shortstop and coaching, with the manager and coach is on a vacation.

Although the Butlers team has not been fortunate winning games, they have the old spirit which makes them stick to it. Not many teams, which had lost four games and only scored eight runs against their opponents have issued with keep on the old pur-

New York, July 16—Call money stood at 9 per cent, was bid for $15,000,000 on the exchange and no money was forthcoming. When the rate moved up to 9 per cent selling was forced in all speculative issues. Stromberg and Crucible fared worst, but the whole list suffered rather severely. U S Steel and other standard issues made new low records for the movement. Steel touching 91¾. The closing was at about the worst prices of all issues.

Because Germany yielded on the question of coal and made occupation of the Ruhr district by the Allies unnecessary, a good many traders expected a rally in the market.

Announcement that a committee of creditors was helping Havemeyer & Bruns, the old crude refining house, confirmed the report that the house was in trouble. It did more than that. It made Wall Street realize that some very big concerns are near the jumping-off place. Banks do not dare call some of the loans that are in difficulty because profiteering borrowings have been so large that under the hammer they might not realize enough to save the banks.

It is reported that a large consignment of automobiles have been offered under the market price by a leading company.

Invincible Oil was the one stock to make a new high record. It did so because of a new well brought in.

New York Sub-Treasury Loss

New York, July 16.—The sub-treasury lost $582,000 to the banks on Thursday, making a cash net loss since Friday of $5,405,000.

HIGHER MONEY AIDS BEARS

Steels, Oils, Equipments, Motors and Rails React; Selling Pressure Strong

By W. H. ROSS,
Financial Editor.

Stocks on the New York Stock Exchange market were lower in the second hour than in the first. Selling pressure became strong toward the close of the forenoon. A higher money rate aided bears. Call loans renewed at 9 per cent.

The market was more active, transactions for the first hour totalling about 140,000 shares. At the end of the morning shares showed losses from fractions to five points. Steels, oils, rails, motors and equipments participated in the reaction.

Among issues to decline the most were the Atlantic Gulf, Hadley Baker, Baldwin Chandler, Studebaker, Pierce Arrow, Invincible Oil, Tobacco Products and Industrial Alcohol.

Atlantic Gulf showed the largest loss. U. S. Steel was off a point late in the forenoon, touching Wednesday's common sold at a new low for the year.

MARKET HAS WEAK START.

The market had no better tone when it opened today than when it closed Yesterday. Prices were lower in the instance of a dropped several points. Among the weakest were Crucible, American Locomotive, Best Foods, Baldwin Locomotive and Tobacco. On the first sales they were from one to two points lower. There were a few strong issues, however, Standard Oil opened with four points gain, Delaware, Lackawana & Western advanced two and Bethlehem one. Rails began weak but soon showed a tendency to rise, but oils, steels, equipments and motors were inclined the other way. Little was done in tires at the beginning. They were a weak group the day before. They are now reflecting the effect of any slowing down of the automobile industry. According to reports they are far behind on orders.

BIG DEMAND FOR TIRES.

In this connection statements by rubber corporations are interesting. The Goodyear Company reports its passenger car tire business has increased 73 per cent; in casings and 107 per cent in tubes so far this month as compared with last year. Goodyear tire sales were from 40 per cent. to 50 per cent, according to class, greater in June than in the corresponding 1919 month while the United States Rubber Company is receiving more tire orders than it can execute.

As to the future of the automobile industry, Colonel John W. Prentiss of Hornblower & Weeks-Hemphill, Noyes take at least 30,000,000 cars to supply the world demand of the future. In an article in The Saturday Evening Post he says:

"In the United States today there are 7,500,000 automobiles and trucks in use; in England 625,000, in France 260,000 and in all Europe 1,000,000. The rate of consumption in the United States is going to require at least 1,000,000 cars and trucks a year for next ten years. What demand from the rest of the world will be it is hard to foretell, but a medium-priced American automobile can be sold instantaneously to any part of the world today and in many foreign countries it brings a higher price in American dollars than it brings in this country."

Blames the Government

In commenting upon the handicap imposed upon the steel industry by the car shortage, a New York banker said: "The present administration does not seem able to grasp the importance of remedying at once strained conditions as applied to business and finance. It is admitted that the greatest drawback to business progress is scarcity of rolling stock which has not only tied up shipments but created hundreds of millions of frozen credit. Yet, in face of this, equipment companies which are capable of turning out several hundred thousand cars annually are running on part time only. One company, in fact, is shut down tight."

Corporation Earnings

For the twenty-four weeks from Sept. 1, 1919, to date, the Interstate Commerce reports to the New York Stock Exchange profit of $787,487,000 as compared with $982,118,000 last year. Net profits of the American Beach Mag. Corporation for the 12 months ended with May last amounted to $702,982 after charges and Federal taxes. Preferred dividends amounted to $502,863. Its net profit is equal to $6.70 on the outstanding no par stock.

For the first quarter of this year the American Brake Shoe and Foundry Co., reports net profits of $624,206 after charges and taxes.

Net profits of the American Telephone & Telegraph Co. are now reported at $54,000,000 annual rate in contrast with the $44,000,000 earned in the 1919 calendar year. For the half year to June 30 the company earned $25.50 a share.

Western Union's net for the first half of 1920 amounted to $6,854,000, which is equal to $8.87 a share on 800,000 shares. This compares with $39,955,000 and net income $6,854,000.

Mills Cut Cotton Prices

According to a statement from New York, large mills are ready to cut prices on large orders, and that there is considerable price shading in quite progress in the goods market just now. It is said: "Mill prices for the same fabrics from a single producer have varied considerably, according to brokers, who see in such quotations a disposition on the part of the mills to favor the large operators."

Boston List Irregular at Opening and Weak Later; Curb Issues Decline

The Boston market was quiet at the opening and dull all the morning. The active list was about evenly divided between advances and declines, but largest changes were losses. While the movement was irregular during the forenoon, the trend was distinctly downward before it was over. Trading was featureless. Issues which were most often dealt in had a narrow range. Large fluctuations were by a few issues and on scattered transactions. Copper issues reflected Gray & Davis and other auto accessory shares were inconspicuous. Packing issues were inert. There was some small lot business in American Telephone.

Among the curb issues sold on more were Island Creek, United Drug first preferred and Eastern Manufacturing. Small losses were imposed upon Calumet & Arizona, New Haven, Conner Company, Greenfield Tap and Warren Brothers.

Issues to advance fractionally were American Woolen preferred, National Leather, Swift & Company, Waldorf, Bigheart and North Butte.

TAME OPENING FOR CURB.

The Curb Exchange had a tame opening and stayed quiet all the morning. In early trading the price trend was indefinite but before the end of an hour the market had a weak tone. Active issues at the outset were Eureka and Imperial oil both receded. Among strong ones were Arizona Silver, Tip Top, Crystal and Homa. There were no early transactions in high priced stocks.

At the end of an hour Arizona Silver and Tip Top had lost gains and Bagdad was off 1 cent at 58 cents, Crystal 2 cents at 44 cents, First National 8 cents at 90 cents. Heela 1 cent at 6 cents and Imperial 1 cent at 15 cents.

WHISKEY SEIZED IN BOAT RAIDS

Find Twenty-Eight Cases in Colonial Liner at Providence; Two Arraigned

Providence, July 16.—Federal prohibition agents raided two New York boats at their piers here and twenty-eight cases of bonded whiskey were seized in the stateroom of Bert Greeley, third officer of the Lexington of the Colonial Line.

Two hundred cases of whiskey were found in the storeroom of the Tennessee of the Bay State Line, but since this liquor was covered by a permit it was not seized by the enforcement officers.

Federal officers are now searching for Greeley who was not on the ship at the time of the raid. His home address is unknown.

A garage at No. 172 Byfield street was also raided by the agents who seized five five-gallon cans of alcohol that was packed in the tonneau of an automobile. Later Samuel Rosenberg and Louis Strauss, both of Byfield street, were arrested and arraigned before a United States commissioner, charged with illegally having liquor in their possession.

HARVARD ADOPTS NEW RETIREMENT SYSTEM

A new system of retiring allowances for the Harvard professorial staff is announced today. Ten per cent. of the salary voted each teacher will be retained yearly by Harvard to be invested and applied to the purchase of an annuity for him.

Some such arrangement was made necessary by the fact that the Carnegie pension system, upon which the university largely depended for allowances to its teachers after their retirement, was altered in 1915 into a contributory insurance arrangement.

Physician Acquitted

Dr. Joseph W. Grady of No. 267 Tremont street was found not guilty in the Central Court on a charge brought by the Board of Health that the doctor had inserted misleading advertising in an Italian newspaper.

Veteran Twice Blinded by Gas Affairs

"Two years ago I was blinded by German mustard gas at Chateau Thierry; today I have been blinded by the figures of the business experts," John B. Holland told the Public Utilities Commission, in opposing the petition of the East Boston Gas Company to increase its standard price from $1.05 to $1.55 per thousand feet.

The gas company's plea was based largely upon the report of an expert who had made an investigation of their holdings. It was taken under consideration.

Holland served overseas in the medical detachment of the 101st Infantry, 26th Division. His discharge showed, he said, that he was temporarily blinded by the mustard gas, two years previous to the day. He is now manager of the American Legion Employment Bureau at East Boston.

Application of the Newton and Watertown Gas Light Company for an increase in its rate from $1.05 to $1.55 was continued until July 21 by the commission.

FRANCE LIMITS K. OF C. TOUR

Tourist Bureau Decides Only 250 May Go on Pilgrimage in August

New York, July 16.—At the request of the tourist bureau of the French government the Knights of Columbus officials announced here that the pilgrimage to France and Italy next month will be limited to 250 members.

William J. McGinley, supreme secretary of the K. of C., in making the announcement, said that 223 persons, representing every State in the Union, had already paid their $950 covering the six weeks' tour.

Assurance has been received, the secretary also said that Marshal Foch will unveil the statue of Lafayette in Metz on August 7. The statue is the gift of the K. of C. to the people of France.

From Metz, the Pilgrims will go to Rome, where they will be received by Pope Benedict, who will officiate at solemn mass in the Vatican Gardens. The Vatican Choir will sing.

IN THE rise of every one of America's great businesses has been a period when capital was needed to expand from small-scale operation to national proportions.

Those who invest at that time reaped fortunes.

Our business is now at that stage.

MARKETMAN FINED FOR SHORT WEIGHT MEAT

William Krasnoff, proprietor of the Quality Market, Massachusetts avenue, Cambridge, was found guilty of giving underweight in a sale of meat and was fined $10 today in Cambridge District Court. Krasnoff was charged in a complaint made by Inspector Healy of the Cambridge Weights and Measures Department, with giving short weight in beefsteak sold to Alice Steffen, twelve years old, of No. 62 Haskell street, Cambridge. The marketman's arrest, Healy said, was part of a campaign to stop short sales to children who do the family marketing.

MEASURES THAT WOULD CURE MOST OF THE TROUBLES AND TENDENCIES WHICH DISTRESS AND ALARM US TODAY

(1) To nominate for the Presidency by direct nomination and to elect by popular vote.
(2) To elect the Cabinet officers and make them responsible to Congress.
(3) To deprive the President of the power of patronage; to put all public offices as nearly as possible under Civil Service, and have appointments made by a committee of Congress.
(4) To elect Federal Judges, including the Supreme Court Justices, by popular vote.
(5) To apply the Initiative, the Referendum and the Recall to national matters.

Duty of America to Practise, Not Talk, Democracy

One of our great banks has figured that the world war laid an average debt of $130 upon every man, woman and child living. The yearly interest toll per capita is $6.

Of course, there are millions of inhabitants of the earth who will pay none of this debt directly and very little indirectly. The savage and semi-savage tribes of Asia, Africa and South America will pay only in having to remain in a backward state longer than they would if the civilized nations had not tried to destroy each other.

The direct paying will have to be done by the industrious and efficient—that is to say, by about half or perhaps less than half of the world's population. And as they toil the harder to lift this new burden they should ask themselves what they can do to prevent its recurrence.

They were propaganded into accepting and supporting the war, only to learn since that most of the things they had been told to make them warlike were untrue.

They are disillusioned; but the old machinery of deceptions was not destroyed or reformed. It is as active as ever. The fact that some thirty little wars are still blazing among the embers of the big war and that imperialism is still rampant among a majority of the world's governments proves that sane thinking has yet to become general.

The weary Old World has been fooled into expecting immediate and complete rescue by the New.

Its people are impatient because it does not come. It will not, cannot come in the way they have been mistakenly hoping. It can come only through their own fundamental efforts, and the longer they delay setting their own ruins in order the harder will be their ultimate disappointment.

This disappointment they will have to go through. It is inescapable. And while they are in it, their judgment of us will be bitter. Because they have understood us as little as we have understood them, they will swing from an extreme of fatuous trust to the opposite extreme of entire distrust.

But extreme opinions do not last. Especially if not based on facts. And we here in America have control of our own facts. We can determine for the future whether we shall deserve the world's praise or blame and can, therefore, afford confidently to await the calmer issue.

By preaching gloriously in words and then failing sadly in acts, President Wilson has for the moment put this nation in a hole. He, however, will soon pass, and the mighty forces of America will remain to correct his blunders.

We believe that it is both the duty and opportunity of the American people to take the lead in bringing about the kind of sane thinking which will tend in the long run to diminish war and invite peace.

They can do it by voting decisively to keep out of foreign entanglements, to play no games of conquest or guarantee, but to perfect here at home the spirit and institutions of a great, peaceful democracy as an example for mankind.

Three Ways in Which Public Can Assist Railroads

There are at least three ways by which public co-operation can help to reduce the car shortage.

The average freight car is loaded to only 70 per cent. of its capacity. More diligent loading, therefore, will make the existing equipment yield increased service.

Thirty per cent. of all car mileage goes into the haulage of "empties." Better organization of traffic could reduce this.

Domestic shippers have forty-eight hours in which to unload before having to pay demurrage. The margin is brief, but emergency conditions justify prompt action. Every hour saved in a car's detention means an hour gained for new traffic.

Closer organization of shippers by trades, districts and communities with a view to speeding the existing equipment would do much toward improving the situation.

More than a generation ago Prussia had a similar problem. Bismarck worked it out by organizing in each village a local transportation council to advise with the railroads as to local needs. These local councils fed into district councils and the district councils in turn into a central council.

Thus, every condition and need throughout the kingdom was reflected promptly and made the subject of joint study between shippers and carriers for mutual advantage. When the Prussian railroads were taken over by the State, a machinery of helpful advice was already in operation.

Not all German examples are bad.

THE GOSSIP OF MIDDLE AGES

Scandal is bad enough, no matter who starts it or where it originates, but when the scandal mongers are women past middle age it is worse than deplorable.

The older a woman grows the more she should possess understanding.

Age and experience are supposed to throw much light on many sucles of human life, and the result should be more charity for the unfortunate, more of the milk of human kindness for all.

Mothers and grandmothers, teach your children to respect the right of everyone to a good reputation if they need it.

But suppose the person deserves criticism, you think, what then?

The older you are the more you should know the value of a clear and fair name, and the more careful you should be not to besmirch the name of anyone lest you prove to be mistaken and injustice be done.

As persons grow older they should grow more lovely, more kindly, more unselfish and free from petty jealousies.

You cannot be happy and enjoy life if you have evil thoughts about others.

And another thing: The younger generation needs inspiration and help.

You cannot help by backbiting.

More Truth Than Poetry

Constitutional Happiness

By S. E. KISER

An organization is being formed for the purpose of securing a constitutional amendment to prevent divorce.

IF there's any little thing
That offends your finer senses,
Why submit to suffering?
Where there's license vice commences.
When a woman seeks divorce,
Make her turn from that solution;
If she can't be coaxed, use force—
Let's amend the Constitution.

MAKE the poison ivy cease
To keep troubled people scratching;
Take the mussiness from grease,
Stop the mumps from being catching.
Let the bumblebee be taught
That his stinging mars your pleasure;
Halt all nuisances—why not?—
By a proper legal measure.

IF by children's crying you
Are made nervous or offended,
Let the good old Constitu-
Tion be hastily amended.
By amendments cause the cats
To renounce their yowling habits;
Let's amend away the rats
And the roaches and the rabbits.

IT is foolish to permit
Others to keep on pursuing
Courses that they ought to quit—
They should do as we are doing!
Make them pure, as we are pure—
Mixing always means pollution—
Those who marry must endure;
Let's amend the Constitution.

Letters to the Editor

Help the M. S. P. C. C.

Editor Boston American:

May I use your columns to call public attention to the serious situation of one of our very important charities?

Last year the Massachusetts Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Children had under its protection more than a thousand different children every month. The children were not only unfortunate through sickness, poverty or otherwise, but were actually abused or neglected and not given a fair chance by their parents. To care for these children adequately, we were forced to consume all the income from our small endowment, all our contributions, and all our unrestricted bequests, and yet we closed the year with a deficit of $20,000. We need a great many more supporters, for less than half the money spent came from current contributions.

The situation is acute, if not critical, and one of two things must happen, either we must receive more funds through contributions and bequests, or we shall have to curtail our work. We are the only agency of our kind working among 1,19,000 Massachusetts children. We have never refused our help to abused and neglected children anywhere in Massachusetts, firmly believing that if we do good work, we can count on generous friends of children to furnish money, but we must change our policy and radically curtail the work, unless we can steadily increase our contributions and continue to receive large sums as bequests. We shall continue to do our utmost for the children who are victims of misfortune and degeneracy, confident that when our need is known a generous public will come to their aid.

John H.Sturgis is our treasurer. Contributions should be sent to him at No. 43 Mt. Vernon street, Boston.

GRAFTON D. CUSHING,
President, Massachusetts Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Children.

IN THE subway.
AT THE rush hour,
AND SUCH a crowd.
THAT THOSE who stood.
SWAYED BACK and forth.
ONE SOLID mass.
AND HAD no fear,
FOR LACK of strap.
OR LACK of seat.
AND WHERE I stood.
WITH SOMEONE'S breath
UPON MY neck.
AND MY own breath.
UPON THE neck.
OF SOMEONE else.
I LOOKED across.
TO WHERE a woman.
GENTLY CLOTHED.
WAS TIGHTLY jammed.
BETWEEN TWO men.
ONE GREASY man.
AND SHORT and fat.
AND ONE tall man.
WITH BLEARY eyes.
AND AT my left.
TWO OTHER men.
HELD TO a bar.
THAT GUARDS the door.
AND TALKED of leagues.
AND WETS and drys.
AND HOW they'd vote
WHEN NEXT Fall came.
AND THEN the train.
WENT ROUND a curve.
AND WE all swayed.
WHILE THEY held fast.
AND LAUGHED.
BECAUSE WE swayed.
AND TALKED some more.
OF POLITICS.
AND ALL the time.
THE GENTLE woman.
TIGHTLY HELD.
WITHIN THE mass.
HAD IN her eyes.
A LOOK of fear,
OR SHAME,
FOR JUST herself.
AND WHERE she was.
AND EVERY night.
SHE TRAVELS there.
AS THOUSANDS do.
AND NO one cares.
AND HUSBANDS come.
AND BROTHERS come.
AND CRUSH her flesh.
AND TALK of leagues.
AND HOW they'll vote.
TO MAKE their land.
A BETTER land.
IN WHICH to live.

I THANK you.

Humble Suggestion to the Shipping Board

And Some Other Things

Copyright, 1920, by Star Company

Eight thousand immigrants come from Italy on one ship. Good news for the United States, which needs good work, intelligence and good citizenship that Italians bring to America.

Unfortunately, high grade profiteering is done by the steamship companies that bring these needed workers. The steerage fare that used to cost fifteen to twenty dollars costs now eighty-five to one hundred and thirty-five dollars.

The Government complains that it cannot get rid of a lot of wooden ships, recently built. Why not use them to take school teachers and other students abroad and bring good workers back at cost, no steerage, no first cabin, no deck "too good for the lower class."

Do you say that would never do? We have only one class on our railroads. In France and England they have three; in Germany four.

The Ukraine, where Professor Friedlander and Dr. Cantor were murdered while distributing charity, is a part of Russia opposed to Bolshevist control, also a part of Russia where Jews are most earnestly hated and frequently murdered. That should be remembered by any one trying to keep track of Russian affairs. It appears that the two men, on an errand of charity, carried on their person "about four hundred thousand dollars in American money." That this should have been necessary seems strange. It certainly required courage, in a land of bandits.

As you read this, Russians and Poles are fighting savagely, dying like flies, blowing each other up, cutting each other's throats. The rest of the world hardly realizes or cares anything about it. History will give a few lines to it. And all the killing is done for nothing. Meanwhile, Poland is in the Peace League, and they may well ask how that League intends to prevent all wars in FUTURE, if it can't stop ONE war now.

Farmers in the Northwest need twenty-five millions to move their crops. They ask working people to deposit their savings in banks controlled by the Farmers' League. Their savings would draw good interest, move the crops and help to make food more plentiful and cheaper.

If labor in cities and labor on farms would combine savings, intelligence and numbers, a great deal could be done. That stage as yet has not been reached.

Strange things, strange crimes especially, follow war.

You read newspapers, and the headlines stay in your memory.

Ruth Randall writes a diary; the last page tells of the killing of her friend and herself.

A bridge expert, who knew everybody and whom everybody knew, taught the world the science of auction bridge. And, like other professional gamblers, he knew something better than science. He had marked cards and a "faro deck" that made it impossible to lose. He was found sitting, dead, with a bullet hole in his forehead, and the entire "Who's Who" of Palm Beach and the roof gardens seemed to be involved.

A young army officer decides to kill his wife because he wants the gay life once more and is interested in another, younger woman. For a dollar and a half he hires a tramp to help him "stage a robbery." When the robbery is staged in a dark hallway, he kills the tramp, and also his wife and her unborn child. The tramp is accused, he and the wife are among the dead that don't talk. But FACTS do talk, and the man will pay the penalty.

A New England sheriff reports a powerful car going at high speed. Two in it, the chauffeur and the wife of the owner. Both are found beside a wire fence dead, chauffeur hanging on the fence is supposed to have committed murder and suicide.

Gahin, the "King of the Spaniards," lies quiet with a bullet in his heart, his diamond rings and cash missing. His friend, "Handsome Charley," admits that he did it because "a lonesome lady friend wanted to get back to her home in Minneapolis" and he wanted some new clothes.

You could spread this list out almost indefinitely, including the English husband who took his young wife for a walk in the moonlight and shot her dead; another English husband who killed his wife by feeding her a mixture intended to destroy weeds in garden paths. He met a more interesting lady.

One interesting thing is the fact that the murderers are caught nearly always. The Elwell case is an exception thus far. Interesting, also, is the boast of Lieutenant Wanderer, who "staged the robbery," that "pulling off a little thing like that, after you have been in the army where everybody thinks all the time about shooting, is a simple thing to do."

Altogether, the Allied Nations and the United States owe ONE HUNDRED AND SEVENTY-EIGHT THOUSAND MILLIONS of dollars, quite a debt. They have a plan for getting rid of a good deal of it. This is the plan:

France owes England about half as much as England owes America. England is willing to forgive the debt of France if America will forgive her debt, twice as big. Then perhaps France would forgive Italy a debt half as big as the French debt forgiven by England, Italy might forgive somebody else, and thus a good deal of debt might be wiped out.

Not a bad idea, FOR THE ALLIES.

It wouldn't be bad for the United States either, if the alternative to forgiving everything that Europe owes us, amounting to ten thousand millions, were joining the Peace League and continuing to supply the millions and the men. Better lose what we'll never get than contribute what we have left.

Italy, by the way, has the smallest national debt, less than two-thirds of the United States debt. Germany has the biggest debt, then France, then England, next the United States with a debt of twenty-five thousand millions. Italy last, owing eighteen billions.

How much should we have been in debt if we had been next door to the fighting instead of three thousand miles away, and if we had gone in at the beginning?
